THETFORD.

In this then famous [a] town was a ſociety of Religious perſons [b] in the church of St. Mary [c] as early as the reign of King Edward the Confeſſor, if not before. Hither [d] Arfaſtus or Herfaſtus biſhop of the Eaſt Angles removed his epiſcopal ſeat from North Elmham, A. D. 1075 [a]. But it continued here only nineteen or twenty years, and then was tranſlated to Norwich. After which, that great nobleman [b] Roger Bigod or Bigot, by the advice of biſhop Herbert [c] and others, built a monaſtery here about A. D. 1104 [d]. and ſhortly after brought Cluniac monks from Lewes in Suſſex, and placed them in it, making it ſubordinate to the abby of Cluny in France. But this houſe and place being found inconvenient, the ſame generous nobleman began on the other ſide of the water, a little without the town, a moſt ſtately monaſtery and church to the honor alſo of the bleſſed Virgin Mary. But dying ſhortly after, prior Stephen [e] carried on the work, and met with ſo much encouragement, that he finiſhed it in about ſeven [f] years, and removed his convent into it on the feaſt of St. Martin, A. D. 1114 [g]. This priory was made deniſon 50 Ed. 3 [h]. and 26 Hen. 8. was found to be endowed with 312 l. 14 s. 4 d. ob. q. per ann. as Dugdale, and 418 l. 6 s. 3 d [i]. as Speed; and was granted in exchange, 32 Hen. 8. to its patron Thomas duke of Norfolk, who was once intended to refound herein a college [k] of Secular prieſts.

[a] Huntingdon, lib. ii. f. 318. mentions a council held by archbiſhop Theodore at Tedford. And, if ſo, here were then probably monaſteries and churches. But perhaps the hiſtorian or his editor might miſtake the town's name for Heortford or Twyford.

[b] Leland, Collect. vol. iii. p. 25. ſaith, They were Secular canons: The charters in the Monaſticon of Roger and William Bigot ſeem to favour the opinion for monks. They could not be Friers Preachers, as Mr. Weaver, p. 827. makes them: For ſuch were not heard of in England till two hundred years after. Monks here were in ſome place of this town, if not at St. Mary's, before the year 1076. when Ingulf, edit. Oxon. p. 76. tells us, That of the ſixty two monks whom he then found at Croyland, fifteen were of Thetford.

[c] Though this old church of St. Mary be on the Suffolk ſide, yet the greateſt part of the preſent town, and the corporation being now uſually reckoned in Norfolk, I ſhall here under Norfolk, ſpeak of all the Religious Houſes within the liberty of Thetford.

[b] Not Hugh, as Camden and Weaver. Nor was this Roger buried here, notwithſtanding his epitaph, and the teſtimony of ſeveral hiſtorians; but at Norwich, as appears from a famous action which theſe monks brought againſt biſhop Herbert for their founder's body before K. Henry 1. in which the biſhop caſt them, and got his charges, and a ſubmiſſion, as appears from Regiſtr. iii. prioris et convent. Norvic. mſ. f. 56.

Conq* [c].) here was fixed an alien priory of Benedictine [d] monks from that foreign houſe; which, upon the wars with France, being ſeiſed into the king's hands, was granted, 47 Ed. 3. to Hugh Faſtolph; 22 Ric. 2. to John Devereux for life; and 3 Hen. 5. to John Wodehouſe and John Ikelyngton; but K. Edward 4. gave it to the dean and canons of St. Stephen's Weſtminſter, who enjoyed it till the general diſſolution; and then it was granted, 2 Ed. 6. to Oſbert Mundeford and Thomas Gawdy; but it is ſince by exchange become part of the poſſeſſions of the biſhopric of Ely.

THE alien priory here is part of the endowment of King's college in Cambridge, as pat. 1 Ed. 4. p. 3. m. 23. The manor and advowſon of the church belonged to the abbeſs and nuns of the Holy Trinity at Caen in Nomandy, by the grant of King William Rufus.

HITCHAM or Hecham.

HERE is ſaid to have been a cell of Cluniac monks to Lewes [a], to which monaſtery this town was given by their founder William de Warren earl of Surrey [b] in the beginning of the reign of K. William Rufus. After the diſſolution the manor and church here, with ſeveral other eſtates belonging to that priory in Norfolk, were granted, 29 Hen. 8. to Thomas duke of Norfolk.

NORWICH.

AMONG the monks, which Ingulph found in his church of Crowland A. D. 1076. there were fourteen from Chriſt Church in Norwich [c]; of which Religious houſe nothing elſe hath yet occurr'd. It is more certain that Herbert Loſing [d], formerly prior of Fiſcamp, and afterward abbat of Ramſey, being made by K. William Rufus biſhop of Thetford, and having obtained near and under the caſtle of Norwich ground whereon to build a church, biſhop's palace, offices for the monks, etc. A. D. 1094 [e]. tranſlated the epiſcopal ſeat hither. Two years after he began a noble cathedral church here to the honor of the Holy Trinity; and, on the ſouth ſide of the ſame, houſes for a prior and ſixty Benedictine monks, who were ſettled here about the year 1100. and continued till the general diſſolution, when the yearly revenues of the biſhopric were valued at 1050 l. 17 s. 6 d. in the whole, and 978 l. 19 s. 4 d. clear. And the revenues of the prior and convent were rated at 1061 l. 14 s. 3 d. ob. per ann. as Speed [f]. The ſite of this monaſtery was granted to the dean and ſix prebendaries, who were inſtituted as the chapter of this cathedral by K. Henry 8. 2 Maii 1538. The ſite of the epiſcopal palace was alſo reſerved to the lord biſhop of this ſee, when they were diveſted of all the other manors, lands, advowſons and temporal eſtates belonging to the old biſhopric, and in lieu of the ſame endowed with the abby of Hulme S. Bennet's and the priory of Hickling, 27 Hen. 8.

Henry 1. or at leaſt not till after the foundation of the church and monaſtery; and poſſibly it might not be effected ſo ſoon as intended, on account of the king's diſpleaſure againſt Herbert about thoſe years. See Angl. Sacr. vol. i. p. 802. Herbert is indeed ſtyled biſhop of Thetford as low as A. D. 1106. in Angl. Sacr. vol. 1. p. 614. But more credit is to be given to the charters of K. ST. LEONARD's [a] near Norwich.

ON a hill near the city in Thorp wood [b] biſhop Herbert built a little priory and church dedicated to St. Leonard, wherein he placed ſeveral monks whilſt the cathedral church and priory were in building, and a ſucceſſion of others was continued here as a cell to the great monaſtery until the general diſſolution. This houſe was granted, 5 Eliz. to Thomas duke of Norfolk.

LESINGHAM.

THIS manor being given by Girard de Gournay [c], temp. Gul. Rufi [d], to the abby of Becc in Normandy, here became an alien priory, which was ſubordinate to Okeburn in Wiltſhire, the chief of all the houſes in England, belonging to that foreign monaſtery. The priory of Leſingham, after the ſeiſing of theſe alien lands, during the wars with France, was leaſed to Sr. Thomas Erpingham, and after to Edward Clere eſquire, at the rent of 16 l. per ann. which K. Henry 6. gave to Eaton college; but K. Edward 4. gave the priory or manor abſolutely to King's college in Cambridge, to which it ſtill belongs.

BINHAM.

Peter de Valoines, nephew to K. William the Conqueror, and Albreda his wife, in the beginning of the time of K. Henry 1[e]. gave the church of St. Mary and the manor of Binham to the abby of St. Alban's, to the intent that here might be ſettled a priory of Benedictine monks, ſubordinate to them of St. Alban's, in the ſame manner as Lewes in Suſſex was to the abby of Cluny. This cell had, about the time of the diſſolution, ſix monks, and eſtates to the value of 140 l. 5 s. 4 d. per ann. Dugd. 160 l. 1 s. Speed; and was granted, 33 Hen. 8. to Thomas Paſton eſquire.

LYNNE.

Petrus Capellanus founded an hoſpital A. D. 1145 [f]. upon the cauſey leading to Gaywood, for a prior and twelve brethren and ſiſters, nine of whom were to be ſound, and three leprous. It was dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, and flouriſhed till the act for diſſolving hoſpitals, etc. in the time of K. Edward 6. and then it ſubſiſted precariouſly above fifty years [a]. But being refounded by K. James 1. and endowed with its ancient poſſeſſions, there is now in it a maſter, who hath 4 s. 6 d. per week; and eleven poor widows, who have each of them 2 s. 6 d. per week, beſides firing.

[a] It is mentioned among the Cluniac monaſteries in cart. 22 Ed. 1. and ſhould be ſo as being a cell to Caſtleacre; they ſtyle themſelves "Prior et canonici." See Mon. Angl. tom. 1. p. 630. a. 60. 637, a. 38. 60. And ſo likewiſe in an arbitration between them and Caſtleacre, which I have in mſ. And from the firſt charter in the Monaſticon, p. 636. it ſeems to me as if the firſt foundation of this houſe was for a prior and canons by William de Liſewis, and that afterwards Godefridus de Liſewis gave it to the priory of Caſtleacre, and obliged them to keep here three monks at leaſt, and thereby it became a cell to that houſe. In a taxation (in Mr. Anſtis's hands) made A. D. 1428. "Normanſbergh in temporalibus 6 l. 0 s. 10 d. non habet ſpiritualia, prior de Caſtleacre habet et ſolvit decimas."

NORWICH, Hyldebrond's Spytel.

On the weſt ſide of Conisford ſtreet was Hilburn or Hyldebrond's Spytell, ſometimes called Ivy hall, or St. Edward's [a] hoſpital, founded about A. D. 1200 [b], by Hildebrond le Mercer citizen of Norwich [c], to the honor of the bleſſed Virgin Mary [d], for a maſter or warden, (which place was in the collation of the biſhop of Norwich) and ſome brethren [e]. But afterwards it was chiefly for the reception of ſeveral poor perſons, who wanted habitations, and then had for ſome time fire, lodging, and proviſions here [f]. It was ſo decayed, 26 Hen. 8. that the rents and poſſeſſions then belonging to it were valued at no more than 14 s. 2 d. per ann.

CREYK.

On a cloſe of forty acres near North Creyk, called Lingeres-croft, was, A. D. 1206. a church built to the honor of the Virgin Mary by Sr. Robert de Nerford chief governor of Dover caſtle; who ſome time after founded here alſo a chapel dedicated to St. Bartholomew, with an hoſpital for a maſter, four chaplains, and thirteen poor lay brethren, which being farther endowed by dame Alice Nerford, widow to the ſaid Robert, and daughter to John Pouchard, it was changed into a priory of Regular canons of the order of St. Auſtin about A. D. 1226. The patronage of this houſe being granted by the ſaid lady to K. Henry 3 [q]. he, anno regni 15. made it an abby, and it was uſually ſtyled "Abbatia S. Mariae de Pratis inter Creyk et Burn-"ham Thorp." About the twenty ſecond year of K. Henry 7 [r]. this monaſtery was looked upon as diſſolved, becauſe the abbat died without a convent to elect another, whereupon the lands and revenues, by the procurement of that king's mother the lady Margaret counteſs of Richmond, were ſettled upon Chriſt's college in Cambridge, being of her foundation.

HORNING.

At the head of the cauſey going down to St. Bennet's abby, was in the beginning of the reign of K. Henry 3. an hoſpital dedicated to St. James, under the government of the almoner of the ſaid monaſtery [a]; which, with the reſt of the eſtate of that abby, was given to the biſhop of Norwich in exchange.

SLEVESHOLM or Slewſham [b].

On a place ſo called, then an iſland, in the fens belonging to the pariſh of Methwold olim Melewde, William earl Warren about A. D. 1222 [c]. placed a prior and ſome Cluniac monks. This priory, cell, or hoſpital [b], was dedicated to the bleſſed Virgin Mary [d], and ſubordinate to Caſtleacre, and as parcel of that monaſtery was granted, 23 Eliz. to Oſbert Mundeford.

BROMEHILL [e] or Bromwell.

Here was a priory of Auſtin [f] canons dedicated to the Virgin Mary and St. Thomas the Martyr in the beginning of the reign of K. Henry 3 [g]. It was ſuppreſſed by bull of pope Clement, May 1528 [h]. and granted by the king in December following to cardinal Wolſey toward the endowment of his college at Ipſwich. Upon the diſappointment of which good deſign by the cardinal's fall, this priory was, 23 Hen. 8. granted to the maſter and fellows of Chriſt's college in Cambridge in exchange for ſome other lands [i]; and tho' reſumed by him ſhortly after [k], yet it was granted unto them again by K. Edward 6 [l]. and they now enjoy it.

Vide in Blomfield's Hiſtory of Norfolk, vol. i. p. 479, etc. an account of this priory, its priors, and benefactors, with a print of its ſeal.

NORWICH.

The Black friers began to live in this city A. D. 1226 [m]. and were firſt ſeated in the church of St. John Baptiſt, between the pariſhes of St. Clement's Fibriggate, St. George's Colgate, and St. Mary Unburnt, by the favour of Sr. Thomas Gelham knt. and other benefactors. But about 1 Ed. 2. they obtained, by the gift of that king [n], the ground on the ſouth ſide of the river in the pariſh of St. Andrew, where the Friers de Sacco had their houſe. And here theſe Black friers built a noble church, and all proper offices for the convent. All which were granted, 32 Hen. 8. to the mayor and citizens.

NORWICH.

About the latter end of the reign of K. Edward 3. mention is made[a] of ſeveral hoſpitals, ſpittles or lazar houſes, places for the reception of leprous people without the gates of this city, which were every one under the government of a maſter, guider or keeper, and ſupported by the voluntary alms of the inhabitants and of travellers. There was one without St. Auſtin's gate, which was ſometimes called the Hoſpital of St. Mary and St. Clement[b]. This remains ſtill an habitation for poor diſeaſed people, and is now call'd the Peſt houſe[c]. There was another juſt without Fibriggate or Magdalene gate, which ſeems to have had a chapel[d] belonging to it. A third without Weſtwyk or St. Bennet's gates[e]. The fourth without St. Giles's gates[f]. The fifth without Nedham or St. Stephen's gates, and was accounted parcel of the poſſeſſions of the priory of Horſham St. Faith's, and as ſuch was granted, 5 Jac. 1. to Edmund Newport, etc[g].

YARMOUTH.

There were in or near this town two ſpittles or houſes for the maintenance of poor lazars or lepers before A. D. 1374[h]. one of which was about half a furlong from the north gates[i].

NEWBRIGGE or De novo ponte de Ykeburgh.

At or near the bridges between Igburgh and Mundford was built[k] a chapel to the honor of St. Mary and St. Laurence[l], with a ſmall Religious houſe adjoining; wherein lived a maſter and brethren lepers A. D. 1373. but afterwards a maſter, wardens, and Friers heremites about A. D. 1449. And in proceſs of time it decayed, ſo that 26 Hen. 8. it was valued as a free chapel at only 3 l. 7 s. 6 d[m]. per ann.

ATTILBURGH.

Sr. Robert Mortimer [b] knt. deſigned the foundation of a chantry or college in the pariſh church here to the honor of the Exaltation of the Holy Croſs; but being prevented by death [c], his executors or truſtees built and endowed the ſame for a maſter or warden and four Secular prieſts about 7 Hen. 4. CASTRE by Yarmouth.

There had been an ancient free chapel in the manor houſe here dedicated to St. John Baptiſt, as early as the reign of K. Edward 1 [e]. wherein Sr. John Falſtoff (who died 38 Hen. 6.) intended to have erected a college for ſeven monks or Secular prieſts, (one of whom to be head) and ſeven poor men [f], and to endow the ſame with one hundred and twenty marks rent charge, out of ſeveral manors, which he gave or ſold to his couſin John Paſton ſen. eſquire, charged with this charity. This Mr. Paſton ſenior laboured to eſtabliſh this pious foundation according to Sr. John Falſtoff's deſign till his death 6 Ed. 4. as did afterwards his ſon and heir Sr. John Paſton knt. But whether ever it was incorporated and fully ſettled I much doubt, there being no further mention of it either in the rolls or in the biſhop of Norwich's regiſtry; only in the valuation, 26 Hen. 8. there is ſaid to have been a chantry in Caſtre hall, of the foundation of Sr. John Falſtoff knt. worth 2 l. 13 s. 4 d. per ann.

HERINGBY.

A college or hoſpital called God's poor almſhouſe, ordered to be founded here by the laſt will and teſtament of Hugh Attefenne, made A. D. 1475. for a maſter, three prieſts, eight poor men and two ſervants, which was performed not long after by his executors. It was valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 23 l. 6 s. 5 d. per ann. as Dugdale and Speed; and granted, 37 Hen. 8. to Sr. Thomas Clere.

[a] Speed. Weaver, p. 828. adds "and Blanch his wife, "and others ſay by Henry earl of Lancaſter and Leiceſter;" and makes the valuation of this houſe 312 l. 14 s. 4 d. which was one valuation of the Benedictine or Cluniac priory here.

[b] Mr. Stow's mſ. collections aſcribe this foundation to Sr. William Mortimer, who died 12 Nov. 1297. but the preamble to the pope's bull for Elingham expreſly mentions it as the intent of Robert, and performed after his death by his executors. Weaver, p. 808, 809.

[c] He died A. D. 1387. but the college was not founded till 1405.

[d] In Mr. Le Neve's papers it is valued at 50 l. 16 s. 4 d. ob. q. as Mr. Blomfield.

[e] Regiſtr. Norvic.

[f] The maſter was to have 10 l. per ann. every prieſt ten marks, every poor man 40 s. and the fourth part of the great manſion here for their habitation.

WALSINGHAM.

Robert Pigot of Little Walſingham, by his will dated A. D. 1492. gave an houſe in or near this town for the uſe of two leprous perſons of good families. And from that time the hoſpital or lazar houſe of Walſingham is often mentioned in the old Will Books.

THETFORD.

Speed and Weaver mention a college here of a maſter and . . . fellows, dedicated to St. Mary, and valued at 109 l. 0 s. 7 d[a]. I find a free chapel of St. Mary in the Bayly end at Thetford, wherein was anciently a gild of a maſter and two prieſts, etc. and in latter times it was made collegiate. But this gild or college was valued at no more than 5 l. 9 s. 7[b]. per ann. as Dugdale. Moſt of the houſes, etc. belonging to it, after ſome former grants, were ſettled 7 Jac. 1. on Francis Morice and Francis Phelips.

LYNNE.

Not far from the town houſe called Trinity hall, nearer to the river, was a college of twelve prieſts founded about A. D. 1500. by Thomas Thurſby[c], who was ſeveral times mayor of this town.

WALSOKEN.

The editor hath now in his hands an indulgence granted by Thomas Jackſon warden of the college or hoſpital of the Holy Trinity of Walſoken in the dioceſe of Norwich, and his brethren to Morrys Ap Jencen and Margaret his wife. It is dated March 2. A. D. 1468. and ſaid to be granted by virtue of a power given them by pope Urban[d], and confirmed by pope Boniface the laſt of that name, pope Nicholas 5. and the then pope Paul 2. But he hath met with nothing elſe relating to this houſe.

[b] If we may ſuppoſe that the valuation of this college in the mſ. uſed by Mr. Speed and Mr. Weaver was wrote 109 s. 7 d. the difference may eaſily be accounted for; tho' I have ſeen in the biſhop's regiſtry at Norwich another valuation of it at 17 l. 6 s. 8 d. viz. the maſter's portion 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. and the two chaplains 5 l. 6 s. 8 d. each.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.

PETERBURGH, formerly Medeſhamſted.

THIS place was originally called Medeſhamſted. Peada king of the Mercians began to build an abby here about A. D. 655 [a]. But dying ſoon after, Wolfere his brother finiſhed it by the help and aſſiſtance of his brother Ethelred and his ſiſters Kinneburga and Kinneſwitha [b], and the care and overſight of Saxulph [c] (who was made firſt abbat) ſhortly after the year 660 [d]. It was dedicated to St. Peter, and from thence the place was afterwards called Peterburgh [e]. Pope Agatho is ſaid to have conferred great privileges upon this abby, and king Etheldred and his nobles to have confirmed them A. D. 680. in a council called for that purpoſe at Hatfield [f]. After it had flouriſhed about two hundred years, it was deſtroyed by the Danes A. D. 870 [g]. and lay in ruins till A. D. 970 [h]. when Ethelwold biſhop of Wincheſter aſſiſted by king Edgar [i] and his chancellor Adulf (who ſhortly after turned monk, and was made abbat of this place) rebuilt it in a more ſtately and magnificent manner. The abbats were called to parliament in the time of K. Henry 3 [k]. but had not the honor of the mitre till near A. D. 1400 [l]. There were about forty [m] monks in it of the Benedictine order at the diſſolution, when king Henry 8. converted it into a cathedral [n], placing therein a biſhop, dean, ſix canons or prebendaries, a divinity reader, eight minor canons, eight lay clerks or ſinging men, eight choriſters, and a maſter of the choriſters, two ſchool maſters, twenty ſcholars, ſix almſmen, and ſome other officers [o]. The revenues of this abby were valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 1721 l. 14 s. 0 d. ob. q. per ann. as Dugd. and 1972 l. 7 s. 0 d. ob. q [p]. as Speed; and the biſhopric is now charged in the king's books at 414 l. 17 s. 8 d. ob. per ann.

DORMUNDESCASTRE[a], Dormancaſter[b], Kuneberceaſter[c], or Caiſtor.

HERE was an ancient monaſtery founded about the middle of the ſeventh century[d]. It had S. Kinneburga daughter of king Penda and wife of Alfred king of the Northumbers for its firſt governeſs[e], and continued till A. D. 1010. when it was deſtroyed by the Danes.

WEDON ON THE STREET, or Wedon Bec.

ST. WERBURGHA, about the year 680. turned the royal palace here into a monaſtery or nunnery[f], and probably for ſome time preſided over the Religious whom ſhe placed in it[g]. How long theſe nuns continued is not certain[h]. But Roger de Thebovil ſhortly after the conqueſt[i], having given a moiety of his manor of Wedon to the abbat and convent of Bec in Normandy, they erected an alien priory here, which king Henry 6. in the twenty ſecond year of his reign made part of the endowment of Eaton college.

BRICCLESWORTH, Bredon, Wermundſey, Repingas, and Wockingas.

THESE are all mentioned as daughter abbies that had their riſe from Medeſhamſtede, and were cells to it or dependents upon it in the time of Cuthbaldus the ſecond abbat, or about A. D. 690. and are ſuppoſed to be near Peterborough, tho' the particular ſituations of them are not now known[k]. Bredon ſeems to have been the chief of them, for that had a charter of privileges granted to it by Berthwulfus king of the Mercians, A. D. 844. But they were all deſtroyed by the Danes in 870. and never reſtored.

Vide Gunton's Hiſtory of Peterborough, p. 6. 127. 238, 239, 240. 242. where all theſe houſes are mentioned; and in p. 342. Berthwulf's[l] charter to Bredon.
Leland. Collect. vol. i. p. 5.

[a] So Capgrave in Vita S. Kinneburgae.

[b] Camden's Britan. p. 435. edit. 1695.

[d] It muſt be founded before A. D. 664. becauſe it is mentioned in Wolfere's charter to Peterburgh of that date, as Mon. Angl. vol. i. p. 64.

[e] Leland, Collect. vol. i. p. 48. ſaith that Kinneburga was firſt foundreſs and firſt abbeſs of this houſe: But Capgrave in her Life, ſaith only that a monaſtery being built here (wihout mentioning by whom) Kinneburga retired from the world, and became abbeſs of it.

[g] Leland. Itin. vol. i. p. 8. ſaith, ſhe was a nun here, and therefore probably governeſs.

[h] Leland, Itin. vol. i. p. 8. ſaith, this houſe was on the ſouth ſide of the churchyard, and deſtroyed by the Danes.

[i] This was confirmed to the abby of Bec in the general confirmation of grants of K. Henry 2. made to that houſe. Mon. Angl. vol. ii. p. 954.

UNDOLA or Oundle.

There was certainly a monaſtery at Undola near Stanford or upon the river Nen, before A. D. 711. when Wilfrid archbiſhop of York died there[a]. But whether it was founded by him, as the writers of his life inſinuate[b], or was before that time a cell to Peterborough[c], and part of the poſſeſſions of that abby, as it certainly was afterwards[d], I cannot determine.

Vide Bracton De legibus Angliae.

PEYKIRK, formerly Pegekyrke.

St. Pega upon the death of her brother St. Guthlac at Croyland about A. D. 714. ſettled herſelf in a cell here[e], which was afterwards improved into a monaſtery, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, and endowed by Edmund Atheling. It ſuffered very much from the Danes A. D. 870. and the next year had its lands ſeiſed by Beorredus[f], king of the Mercians, was deſtroyed again by the Danes A. D. 1013. But however ſubſiſted till A. D. 1048. when the abbat of Peterborough, by the judgment of the king's court, got the houſe and all its revenues annexed to his abby, and the monks thereupon removed to Croyland.

D E A N E.

Here was an ancient priory before the Conqueſt, which was a cell to the abby of Weſtminſter[g], and was ſuppreſſed ſhortly after the Conqueſt by the conſent of the abbat and convent of Weſtminſter, who accepted of a yearly rent for the revenues of it[h].

HAMTONE or Northamton.

On the north[i] part of this town was, as early as A. D. 1076[k]. the priory of St. Andrew[l], which was repaired, endowed, and repleniſhed with Cluniac monks ſubordinate to the foreign houſe of St. Mary De caritate by Simon Seinliz the firſt[m] earl of Huntingdon and Maud his wife, A. D. 1084. This houſe had the ſame fate with other monaſteries of this order, to be often ſeiſed into the king's hands during the wars with France[n], but was made deniſon 6 Hen. 4. and appeared at the diſſolution to have been endowed with 263 l. 7 s. 1 d. q. per ann. Dugd. 344 l. 13 s. 7 d. Speed. The ſite of it was granted, 4 Ed. 6. to Sr. Thomas Smith.

In the church here Hugh de Leyceſter [e], the ſheriff of the county and ſteward to Maud ſiſter of earl Symon Seynliz the firſt, in the latter end of the Conqueror's reign or beginning of William Rufus, placed four Cluniac [f] monks, who labouring under want of water and other inconveniencies were in few years removed to the town of DAVENTRE.

Where the ſaid Hugh, near the pariſh church (wherein were then four Secular canons) built a priory to the honor of St. Auguſtine the monk, ſubordinate to St. Mary De caritate [f].

LUFFIELD[a].

A BENEDICTINE[b] priory founded by Robert Boſſu earl of Leiceſter, temp. Hen. 1. to the honor of the Virgin Mary, which being fallen into decay, and the revenues not being ſufficient to maintain the prior and two monks that were left, there was an attempt in the time of king Henry 6. to unite it to Magdalene college in Oxford; but at length, upon the requeſt of king Henry 7. it was ſuppreſſed A. D. 1494. by pope Alexander 6. who annexed the ſame with its poſſeſſions to the collegiate church of Windſor, toward the better ſupport of a chantry and hoſpital, which were to have been founded therein; but the king changing his mind, and building his fine chapel at Weſtminſter, this monaſtery was given A. D. 1500. to the abbat and convent there, and confirmed to them by pope Julius 2. A. D. 1504. The rental of the priory of Luffield made 8 Ed. 4. amounted but to 19 l. 19 s. 2 d. The ſite thereof, as parcel of Weſtminſter was granted, 5 Ed. 6. to Sr. Nicholas Throgmorton.

WEDON PINKNEY.

Here was a Benedictine priory dedicated to St. Mary, and cell to St. Lucian near Beavoys in France, as early probably as the reign of K. Henry[a]. It was liberally endowed by ſeveral of the De Pinkeni's who were lords here. But the wars between England and France hindering the monks of St. Lucian from enjoying the revenues of it, they ſold their right therein A. D. 1392. to the abbat and convent of Bittleſden in Buckinghamſhire, who enjoyed it not long. For about A. D. 1440. it was made part of the endowment of All Souls college in Oxon.

FODRINGHEY.

Here was in ancient time, ſaith Leland [e], a nunnery; the nuns were tranſlated to De la pre near Northampton; of whom and their houſe I have met with no farther account. But in this town, upon a parcel of ground containing ſix acres between the caſtle and the parſonage, procured from Edward duke of York, king Henry 4. in the year 1411. began a noble college to the honor of the bleſſed Virgin Mary and All Saints, for a maſter, twelve chaplains or fellows, eight clerks, and thirteen choriſters. But the buildings and endowment being chiefly owing to the ſaid duke of York, he is to be accounted co-founder, and is here buried. In 26 Hen. 8. it was ſeiſed of lands to the yearly value of 499 l. 15 s. 9 d. in the whole [a]. 419 l. 11 s. 10 d. ob. clear. But it was not ſuppreſſed till the time of K. Edward 6. The ſite was granted, 5 et 6 Phil. et Mariae to James Crew.

LINDISFARNE or Holy Iſland.

In the year 635. upon the firſt coming of St. Aidan out of Scotland to plant Chriſtianity among the Northumbrian Saxons, king Oſwald gave him this iſland, whereon was fixed the ſeat for himſelf and ſucceſſors, biſhops of theſe northern parts, who had here alſo a chapter of an abbat and monks[a]. The cathedral church was dedicated to St. Peter[b], and continued in great eſteem till biſhop Eardulf was forced to leave it for fear of the Danes A. D. 875. Upon the ſettlement of the monaſtery at Durham by biſhop William de Carilafo A. D. 1082. the old epiſcopal church[c] here with all that belonged to it was made part of the endowment, upon which here was afterward a cell of Benedictine monks, ſubordinate to the priory of Durham, which was valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 48 l. 18 s. 11 d. per ann. Dugd. 60 l. 5 s. Speed; and ſtill continues part of the poſſeſſions of the dean and chapter of Durham, being granted to them 33 Hen. 8.

HAGUSTALD, Hextildeſham or Hexham.

St. Wilfrid having obtain'd a grant of this town from St. Etheldreda[f] queen to Ecgfrid king of Northumberland, herein about A. D. 674. founded[g] a church and monaſtery to the honor of St. Andrew, of ſuch fine building as never was before ſeen in theſe parts of Europe. Some few years after, upon the diviſion of the dioceſe of the Northumbers, the ſee of a new biſhop was placed here, where it continued till the year 821. when it was re-united to Lindisfarn. This abby was deſtroyed by the Danes; and after the Conqueſt, upon ſome difference between king Henry 1. and the biſhop of Durham, this place, with the country about it, ſince called Hexhamſhire, was given by that king to the church of York; whereupon archbiſhop Thomas the ſecond placed here a prior (who ſeems to have had a prebend in the church of York[h]) and convent of Regular canons of the order of St. Auſtin, who were endowed at the diſſolution (about which time here were fourteen Religious) with 122 l. 11 s. 1 d. per ann. Dugd. 138 l. 1 s. 9 d. Speed. COQUEDA or Coket.

THIS little iſland is ſaid by Bede[a] to be "monachorum coetibus inſignis" in St. Cuthbert's time, about A. D. 680. Here was till the diſſolution a ſmall houſe of Benedictine monks, cell to Tinmouth[b], as parcel of which priory, 4 Ed. 6. this iſland was granted to John earl of Warwick.

TINMOUTH, olim Dunemuth[c], or Donemade[d].

AMONG the monaſteries and churches founded by St. Oſwald[e] the firſt Chriſtian king of Northumberland, this is reckoned to be one; tho' others aſcribe its foundation to king Ecgfrid. 'Tis evident that St. Herebald, the companion of St. John of Beverley was monk[f] and abbat[g] here in the beginning of the eighth century, and before the end of it[h] this monaſtery was plundered by the Danes, as it was again by them under Hunguar and Hubba[i] in the next century, and by the ſame Pagans a third time in the reign of K. Ethelſtan. The old church was dedicated to the bleſſed Virgin[k], and ſeems to have lain deſolate till the finding of king Oſwin's relicks here a little before the Conqueſt, when, to the honor of St. Mary and that king, Toſti earl of Northumberland repair'd and endow'd this Religious houſe. Upon the baniſhment of Toſti this country was given by the Conqueror to Robert de Moubray, who thereupon became earl, and placed in the church here (which had been given by Waltheof earl of Northumberland to the monks at Yarrow, and by earl Albry to Durham) Black monks from St. Alban's in Hertfordſhire, to which abby this priory was ſubordinate; tho' 26 Hen. 8. it was found to have a ſeparate yearly revenue of 397 l. 10 s. 5 d. ob. Dugd. 511 l. 4 s. 1 d. ob. Speed[l]. The ſite and moſt of the lands were granted, 5 Ed. 6. to John duke of Northumberland.

SOUTHWELL.

THE collegiate church of St. Mary here is ſaid to have been founded by Paulinus archbiſhop of York about A. D. 630. and ſeems to have been always under the patronage of the prelates of that ſee, tho' the firſt grant which we meet with of this place is by king Eadwy to archbiſhop Oſcytel A. D. 958. It appears by Domeſday Book that here were ſeveral canons at the Conqueſt, but the number of ſixteen were not ſettled till the next century, and ſo many continue to this day: For tho' the then archbiſhop and prebendaries ſurrendered [a] this church into the hands of king Henry 8. A. D. 1540. yet he refounded the chapter ſhortly after [b], and endowed it with the greateſt part of its ancient poſſeſſions; and tho' it ſuffered again in the time of king Edward 6. it was reſtored by queen Elizabeth, and confirmed by king James 1. The common revenues of this collegiate body are rated at 69 l. 0 s. 1 d. per ann. in the whole [c], and 39 l. 5 s. 6 d. ob. clear. The particular prebends in the Lincoln taxation are valued at 316 l. 13 s. 4 d. and in the printed Valors amount to about 287 l. 5 s. 0 d. And both theſe with all the reſt of their revenues for their vicars choral, etc. were valued in the whole, 26 Hen. 8. at 516 l. 1 s. 6 d. q [d].

[a] Called generally Workſop Priory, but it was ſituate at Radford near Workſop.

[b] It was ſurrendered Nov. 15. 1539. by the prior and fifteen canons, as Willis's Hiſt of Abbies, vol. ii. p. 170.

LENTON[a].

In the beginning [b] of the reign of king Henry 1. William Peverell built a priory here to the honor of the Holy Trinity, and made it ſubject to the great foreign abby of Cluny. It was accounted among the alien priories, and had their fate till the Cluniac [c] monks here got it to be made deniſon [d], by which means it continued till the general diſſolution temp. Hen. 8. when the yearly revenues of this houſe were found to be worth 329 l. 15 s. 10 d. ob. Dugd. 332 l. Leland [e]; 417 l. 19 s. 3 d. Speed. It was granted, 5 Eliz. to John Harrington.

DORCHESTER, olim Dorcic.

UPON the firſt converſion of the Saxons to the Chriſtian faith, Oſwald king of the Northumbers, and Kynegils king of the Weſt Saxons [a] gave this city to St. Birine the apoſtle of theſe parts; who, about A. D. 635. built a church (wherein, as ſome ſay [b], he placed Secular canons) and fixed here the ſeat of his biſhopric, which then compriſed the two large kingdoms of the Weſt Saxons and Mercians. But tho' in after times it was mightily abridged in its extent, (the biſhoprics of Wincheſter, Saliſbury, Exeter, Bath and Wells, Litchfield, Worceſter and Hereford being taken out of it) yet the dioceſe ſtill remained the largeſt in England, and the biſhop's cathedral was in this ſmall village ſituate at the extremity of his juriſdiction, till biſhop Remigius tranſlated the epiſcopal ſeat to the city of Lincoln about A. D. 1086 [c]. The abby of Black canons here was built by Alexander biſhop of Lincoln about A. D. 1140. to the honor of St. Peter, St. Paul, and St. Birine, and was found, 26 Hen. 8. to be endowed with 219 l. 12 s. 0 d. ob. q. per ann [d]. The ſite was granted, 36 Hen. 8. to Edmund Ayſhfield.

OXFORD, St. Frideſwide's, now Chriſtchurch.

ABOUT the year 730. Didanus [e], a petty king in theſe parts, is ſaid to have founded a nunnery here to the honor of St. Mary and All Saints, which conſiſted of twelve Religious virgins of noble birth, under the government of his own daughter Frideſwide, who being buried here and afterward canonized for a ſaint, this monaſtery in proceſs of time was dedicated to her memory, and call'd almoſt always by her name[a]. But the nuns having been diſperſed by the Daniſh wars, this church came into the poſſeſſion of Secular canons, and was burned to the ground A. D. 1004. afterwards it was rebuilt and better endowed for them by king Ethelred. A certain king, before the Norman Conqueſt, is ſaid to have expelled thoſe canons, and to have given this monaſtery to the monks of Abbendon[b] for ſome few years, and then to have reſtored the canons[c]. After the Conqueſt the Seculars were again ejected[d], and an abbat and monks were here for ſome time; then the prieſts got in once more, and continued till A. D. 1111[e]. or 1121[f]. at which time Roger biſhop of Saliſbury placed in this church a convent of Regular canons of the order of St. Auſtin, under the care of Guimond a learned clerk and chaplain to king Henry 1. who became the firſt prior. The annual revenues of this Religious houſe before its ſuppreſſion were valued at 224 l. 4 s. 8 d. Speed; but a mſ. valuation that I have ſeen makes them 284 l. 8 s. 9 d. viz. in ſpiritualties 69 l. 17 s. 11 d. and in temporalties 214 l. 10 s. 10 d. This priory was ſuppreſſed by virtue of a bull from pope Clement 7. dated 3 non. Apr. 1524. allowed of and confirm'd May 10 by king Henry 8. who by letters patents dated July 1. 1525. granted the ſite and lands to cardinal Wolſey, who thereupon began the foundation of a noble college for a dean, ſubdean, one hundred canons, thirteen chaplains, profeſſors in divinity, law, phyſic, and all the liberal arts, and for other perſons, to the number of one hundred eighty ſix, which was dedicated to the Holy Trinity, the Virgin Mary, St. Frideſwide, and All Saints. But before this and other his vaſt deſigns could be perfected, he fell in the year 1529. not only out of the king's favour, but alſo into a praemunire, upon which all his eſtates, real and perſonal, became forfeited; and among his other lands, thoſe appointed for the better endowment of this college, which however continued in being 15 Jan. 1530-1[g]. On or about 17 July 1532. it was augmented with Canterbury college and Peckwater inn, and re-eſtabliſhed for a dean, twelve canons, etc. under the ſtyle of "Kynge Henry the eightis college in Oxford," which was ſurrendered up again into the king's hand 18 July 1545. But the ſee of the biſhop of Oxford being the next year removed from Oſeney, this priory church was made his cathedral, by the name of Chriſt Church; and king Henry 8. refounded[h] the chapter and college, which at preſent conſiſts of a dean, eight canons, one hundred and one ſtudents, eight chaplains, eight clerks, eight choriſters, twenty four almſmen, etc.

The reſolution of removing hence might probably be taken immediately after the decree of the council 1072. And many years might be ſpent in finding out a proper place, ſettling the claim of the archbiſhop of York, building, etc. 'Tis certain that the cathedral of Lincoln was not conſecrated when Remigius died A. D. 1092. However, the ſee was tranſlated in the time of king William the Conqueror, as appears by his charter, Mon. Angl. tom. iii. p. i. p. 253. And I have therefore placed it it in the latter part of his reign. Jo. Brompton, who is pretty particular on this occaſion, makes it in the year 1088. See Hiſt. Angl. Script. x. col. 983.

OXFORD, Univerſity college.

King Aelfred is ſaid to have founded in this city three ſocieties for the advancement of learning, in one of which, called "Parva aula univerſitatis," were placed twenty ſix ſcholars in grammar; another was for the like number of ſtudents in philoſophy and arts, and was named "Aula minor "univerſitatis;" and in the third, viz. "Magna aula univerſitatis," were maintained twenty ſix ſtudents in divinity. If from the laſt of theſe the college anciently called Univerſity hall, and now Univerſity college, had its original, and thereupon claims king Aelfred to be its founder, it has a juſt right to the precedence I have given it. But however that may be, it is more certain that the reſtoration of this old houſe is owing to the legacy of William archdeacon of Durham, who died A. D. 1249, and the endowment to the charity of Walter Skirlaw biſhop of Durham, Henry Percy earl of Northumberland, Sr. Simon Bennet, and other benefactors. The old chapel of this college was dedicated to St. Cuthbert. It was valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 78 l. 14 s. 7 d. per ann. The number of the foundation are at preſent a maſter, twelve fellows, thirteen ſcholars, etc.

OXFORD, St. George.

Robert D'Oily and Roger Iveri founded, A. D. 1074 [a]. and endowed out of their eſtates the collegiate church of St. George within the caſtle for Secular canons, who were diſperſed about A. D. 1149 [b]. when this church with all its revenues was annexed to the houſe of Regular canons at Oſeney. The buildings were afterwards uſed for ſtudents, and there were for ſome time the warden and ſcholars of St. George within the caſtle of Oxford [c]. 'Tis ſaid that king Henry 5. intended [d] to have built a noble college both for artiſts and divines within this caſtle, and to have endowed the ſame with the revenues of the Alien priories, but was prevented by death.

COGGES.

An alien priory of Black [e] monks to the abby of the Holy Trinity at Fiſcamp in Normandy, who ſeem to have been placed here by the anceſtors of Manaſſer Arſic lord of the barony of this place, who confirmed the old and added ſome new donations in the years 1103. and 1107. After the diſſolution of theſe foreign cells, this was given by king Henry 6. toward the endowment of his college at Eaton, to which it was alſo granted, 1 Ed. 4.

CHARLETON upon Otmoore.

Hugh of Grentemaiſnil, before the year 1081. gave to the abby of St. Ebrulf at Utica in Normandy (which he was the reſtorer of) the church here and five yard-lands; and his daughter Adeline de Ibreio, temp. Hen. 1. gave to that monaſtery the manor of Ceorlotona[a]; ſo that, if there was in England an alien priory of Charlton cell to St. Ebrulf, it was here; but it doth not yet appear to me, that any of their monks were placed at this Charlton; for their eſtate here ſeems to have been under the management of their prior at Ware[b]. King Richard 2. and king Henry 4. gave the advowſon of the church here to the prioreſs and nuns of Henwood[c] in Warwickſhire; but the manor, as belonging to the priory of Ware, went toward the endowment of Shene, and, as parcel of the poſſeſſions of this laſt mention'd monaſtery, was granted to Sr. Thomas White and others, *5 et 6. OSENEY.

Robert D'oilly the ſecond (nephew to the firſt of that name) at the deſire of his wife Edith, (who had been concubine to king Henry 1.) built, A. D. 1129. upon one of the iſlets made by the river, not far from the caſtle of Oxford, a priory of canons Auguſtines to the honor of the bleſſed Virgin Mary. This houſe in ſome ſhort time after became an abby, and at the diſſolution had yearly revenues worth 654 l. 10 s. 2 d. q. Dugd. 755 l. 18 s. 6 d. ob. Speed. Upon the erection of the new biſhoprics by king Henry 8. in the year 1542. this abby was changed into a cathedral church of Chriſt and the bleſſed Virgin, wherein were ſettled a dean and ſix prebendaries, etc. who were to be the chapter of the biſhop of Oxfordſhire, whoſe palace was to be at Gloceſter hall: But this eſtabliſhment continued not above three or four years, when, viz. 1546. the conventual church of St. Fridiſwide then called King Henry the eighth's college, was made the cathedral, and called Chriſt church.

OXFORD.

ABOUT half a mile eaſtward of this city is yet in being the little hoſpital of St. Bartholomew, as ancient as the reign of king Henry 1. and probably founded by that prince, when he built his palace at Beaumont [a]. It conſiſted formerly of a maſter who was a prieſt, two healthful brethren, ſix infirm or leprous brethren, and a clerk. It being of royal foundation [b], K. Edward 3. gave, it A. D. 1328. to Oriel college, who were to maintain therein a chaplain and eight poor brothers.

GODESTOW.

John of St. John in the latter end of the reign of king Henry 1. gave ſome ground here to a Religious matron called Editha or Ediva[c], who (aſſiſted by the contributions of well diſpoſed perſons) built thereon an abby for Benedictine nuns, which was conſecrated, A. D. 1138. to the honor of the Virgin Mary and St. John Baptiſt, in the preſence of king Stephen and his queen, the archbiſhop of Canterbury and ſix other biſhops, with ſeveral of the nobility, who moſt of them gave toward the endowment of it. King Henry 2. was a great benefactor [a], on account, as 'tis thought, of fair Roſamund Clifford his concubine here interred. Its revenues, 26 Hen. 8. amounted to 274 l. 5 s. 10 d. ob. per ann. Dugd. 319 l. 18 s. 8 d. Speed [b]. Upon the diſſolution, the ſite, with the greateſt part of the adjoining eſtates, were granted by Henry 8. to his phyſician Dr. George Owen.

[c] She was the firſt abbeſs and gatherer of this congregation of nuns, and procured the raiſing of the buildings and church here; but it doth not appear by the Monaſticon that ſhe gave any the leaſt eſtate; ſo that ſhe ſeems improperly to have been accounted foundreſs of this monaſtery by Leland, Speed, Camden, etc. For John of St John lord of Wolvarcote and Stanton was donor of the ſite, and out of regard to him probably the dedication was to St. John. Br. Twyne in his collections, ♉ 199. out of the Engliſh book of Godſtow ſaith, That this Edith, or (as ſome call her) Ida, was of Wincheſter, had been married to a knight named Sr. William Lamelyne, by whom ſhe had iſſue one ſon (who was abbat of Abindon) and two daughters; that after the death of her huſband, temp. Hen. 1. ſhe had a viſion to go to a place near Binſey, and to build a nunnery where a light from heaven ſhould appear. That ſhe was abbeſs here over twenty four ladies, her eldeſt daughter Emme being firſt prioreſs, and her other daughter Avis, ſecond prioreſs. And it is much more probable, that this Edith was a widow before ſhe began this work, and enter'd into Religion, as Camden, Speed, etc. than that ſhe was the wife of Robert Doily founder of Oſeney, and the ſame who was buried at Oſeney in the habit of a voweſs, as the learned author of the Parochial Antiquities, p. 95. conjectures. For, beſides the entire ſilence of the Oſeney Annals in this point, it is plain that the laſt mentioned Edith lived with her huſband Robert Doily when he confirmed the Oſeney donations in the time of Robert de Querceto biſhop of Lincoln, viz. after the year 1147. OXFORD.

THE Dominican, Preaching or Black friers, in the firſt year of their coming into England, viz. A. D. 1221. repaired to Oxford, where, by the munificence of Iſabel de Bulbec[c] widow to Robert earl of Oxford, they obtained ground in the pariſh of St. Edward, whereon to build an houſe and chapel; but this place being too ſtrait, about forty years after they removed their habitation to a little iſland near the Watergate in the pariſh of St. Ebb, which was given them by king Henry 3. Here the brethren of this order (many of them eminent for their learning) continued till the diſſolution; after which this houſe, with all belonging to it was granted, 36 Hen. 8. to Richard Andrews and John How, who alienated it the ſame year to William Frere and his heirs.

[a] Leland, Collect. vol. i. p. 77. makes this foundation temp. R. Joan. but the charter reciting that it was founded "pro animabus" (among others) "Joannis regis" it ſeems to have been after his death; if it had been in that king's life it would have run "pro ſalute." Mſ. Wood XCIV. f. 37. makes it founded 36 Hen. 3. but it is evident from the records, that it was earlier.

The Carmelite or White friers firſt ſettled in this city about A. D. 1254[b]. Their habitation at firſt was near the river oppoſite to Rewley[c], in an houſe given them by Nicholas de Meules or Molis, ſometime governor of the caſtle of Oxford, on the weſt ſide of Stockwell ſtreet, now part of Gloceſter hall. But, ſixty years after, king Edward 2. gave to twenty four of theſe friers the royal palace of Beaumont, which king Henry 1. had built in the north part of the city. Here they continued till the general diſſolution, and then this friery, with all its appurtenances, was granted to Edward[d] Powell of Sandford, 33 Hen. 8.

K. Henry 3. at the inſtance of Sr. John Handlo, afterward of Borſtall, knt. gave, A. D. 1268. the Friers Heremites of the order of St. Auſtin, a piece of ground in the pariſh of Holy Croſs or Holywell, whereon to build a chapel and lodgings, which they perfected by the bounty of the ſaid Sr. John and other charitable perſons. Here they continued till the general ſuppreſſion, and the ſite of this priory was ſold, 6 Ed. 6. to Henry duke of Suffolk, from whom it came to Dorothy Wadham, who upon part of it founded the college named from her huſband and her.

OXFORD, Merton college.

Walter de Merton clerk, ſometime lord high chancellor of England, and afterwards biſhop of Rocheſter, about the year 1267. began in certain houſes, which he had purchaſed adjoyning to St. John Baptiſt's pariſh church in Oxford, the college called from his name; which ſeems at firſt to have been deſigned only for ſuch of the ſociety of chaplains and ſcholars, which he had founded three years before at Maldon in Surrey, as were capable or deſirous of univerſity learning. But in a ſhort time both ſocieties were united here at Oxford by the founder, whoſe ſtatutes bear date in Auguſt 1274. It was ſo well endowed, 26 Hen. 8. as to be valued at 354 l. 2 s. 6 d. per ann[b]. and at preſent conſiſts of a warden, twenty four fellows, fourteen poſt maſters, etc.

OXFORD, Canterbury college or hall.

The moſt reverend father Symon de Iſlip lord archbiſhop of Canterbury, compaſſionately conſidering the deſtruction, which the two great peſtilences A. D. 1349. and 1360. had made amongſt the clergy all over England and of the ſcholars in this univerſity, in the year 1361. bought in ſeven or eight old hoſtles in the pariſh of St. Mary, and obtained the king's licence to found an houſe for ſtudents both Religious and Secular[b], chiefly in the canon and civil law[c], to be called Canterbury hall. This he finiſhed and endowed for the maintenance of a warden and eleven clerks about the year 1363. Shortly after, he appointed the famous Mr. John Wiclive to be head of this ſociety, who, with the reſt of the fellows being Seculars, was, by ſentence in the court of Rome, at the inſtance of the founder's ſucceſſor Symon de Langham, then cardinal, removed, and the government and revenues of this hall put into the hands of four monks of Canterbury, one of whom was to be warden. From that time this houſe became an habitation chiefly for the ſtudent monks of Canterbury, and was ſubject to the archbiſhop and to the prior and convent of that metropolitical church[d]; and, as parcel of the poſſeſſions of the priory of Chriſt Church in Canterbury, this college was granted to the dean and chapter of Canterbury 33 Hen. 8. But, 38 Hen. 8. it was granted to the dean and canons of Chriſt Church Oxford, and is now part of Chriſt Church college.

SHREWSBURY, St. Alcmund's college.

Elfleda the famous queen or princeſs of the Mercians is ſaid to have founded a collegiate church in this town to the honor of St. Alkmund, ſon of Alured king of Northumberland, (who was killed in the year 800. and was buried firſt at Lilleſhull [a] or Whitchurch [b] and afterward at Derby) which was afterward more amply endowed by king Edgar for the maintenance of ten prebendaries. And ſo [c] it continued till Richard de Belmeis the laſt dean, by the conſent of the pope and king Stephen, conveyed this church and all the lands thereto belonging to a monaſtery of Regular canons erected in the wood of Lylleſhull, which was one of the prebends of this church.

LUDLOW, St. John the Evangeliſt.

Leland, deſcribing Ludlow in his Itinerary, vol. iv. p. ii. p. 74. hath theſe words, "There "is but one paroche church in the towne; but that is very fayre and large, and richly adorned, "and taken for the fayreſt in all thoſe quarters. It ſtandeth even in the middeſt of the town, "and is in the higheſt ground of it. This church hath been much advanced by a brotherhood "therein founded in the name of St. John the Evangeliſt. The original thereof was (as the "people ſay there) in the tyme of K. Edward the Confeſſor, and it is conſtantly affirmed there, "that the pilgrims, that brought the ring from beyond the ſea as a token from St. John the "Evangeliſt to K. Edward, were inhabitants of Ludlow. This fraternity hath a gardian choſen yearly among the burgeſſes; and to this college belong now about ten prieſts, partly found "by the endowment of lands, partly by gatherynge the devotion of people thereabout. And "theſe prieſts have a fayre houſe at the weſt end of the paroch churchyard; and by it is an "hoſpital or almeſhouſe of about thirty poor folks for the moſt part, and ſometimes more, "maintained partly by the fraternity, and partly by money given for obiits."

OSWESTRE or Oſwaldſtreet [d].

Leland tells us [e], that the church of St. Oſwald here "was ſumtime a monaſterie caullid "the White minſter [f], afterward turnide to a paroche chirche, and the parſonage impropriate "to the abbay of Shreuſbyri. The cloiſter ſtood, in hominum memoria, ubi monumenta monachorum."

[f] The town called Album Monaſterium ſeems different from Oſweſtre, in Leland. Collect. vol. ii. p. 105. But perhaps that was Whitchurch; for the Candida Eccleſia built in honor of St. Oſwald, was upon Maſerfeld, where that good king was killed, as Capgrave in Vita S. Oſwaldi regis. But if there ever was a monaſtery here, it was in the Saxon times; for, not long after the Conqueſt, this church of St. Oſwald was given to Shrewſbury.

[g] Not Roger earl of Montgomery, as Malmſbury calls him.

[h] So Odericus Vitalis. The hiſtory of the foundation in the Monaſticon placeth it in 1087. but it certainly was before, in the time of Peter biſhop of Cheſter, who died in 1085. and before the making of Domeſday Book, wherein it is mentioned. It might perhaps be thought on, in 14 Will. Conq. but could not then be built (as Bromton and Leland, Collect. vol. i. p. 219. will have it) by Warin earl of Shrewſbury, though there was about that time one Warin who was ſheriff or vicecomes of Shropſhire, and a benefactor to this monaſtery.

[i] Such was the dedication of a ſmall church, which the earl found in this part of the town, before he founded the abby. Its dedication to St. Peter, St. Paul, and St. Milburgh, I find no where but in Gervaſe Cantuar.

[k] This is the clear value in the Firſt Fruits office, and Stevens, vol. i. p. 32. ſo that 132 l. as in Dugdale, is a miſtake of the preſs.

SHREWSBURY, St. Mary's.

THE church of St. Mary here, which is now parochial, was collegiate formerly, probably as early as king Edward the Confeſſor's time [c], and ſo continued till the general diſſolution. Leland [d] ſaith, that in his time it had "a dean and nine poor prebends, and the king [e] was patron." Here were alſo ſome vicars choral, tho' the whole yearly revenues were rated, 26 Hen. 8. but at 13 l. 1 s. 8 d [f]. Good part of the lands and tithes belonging to this college were granted, 6 Ed. 6. to the grammar ſchool here founded, but the ſite and the dean's houſe were granted, 1 Mariae, to Thomas Reeve and George Cotton.

[a] So Dugd. Baron. vol. i. p. 314. where the Monaſticon is cited for it; but it doth not therein plainly appear, that he was founder.

[b] Thus Leland, Collect. vol. i. p. 232. out of the Geſtes of Guarine and his ſons; which ſeem a little romantic; and perhaps may miſtake as to this foundation, which the charters in the Monaſticon aſcribe rather to Fulk his ſon; and then the time of its building muſt not be placed higher than the reign of K. Henry 2.

[c] It is called in the records, "Prioratus novae abbatiae "juxta Abberbury," which makes it probable, that the Album Monaſterium within a mile of this place, mentioned by Leland, Itin. vol. v. p. 74. ſhould rather be Novum Monaſterium.

[d] So the charters in the Monaſticon, without any expreſs mention of its being directly given to that foreign abby, yet it ſeems to have been a cell to it; becauſe in the Lincoln taxation the head is ſtyled either Cuſtos or Procurator.

[e] "Matilda de Bohun wife to Sr. Robert Burnell, founder "of Bildevais abby, thowgh ſome, for the only gift of the "ſite of the houſe, toke the byſhope of Cheſter for foun"der." Leland. Itin. vol. viii. p. 80. But among all the charters in the Monaſticon, there is no mention of this Matilda or Sr. Robert: But the foundation is in two or three places expreſly aſcribed to Roger biſhop of Cheſter.

NEWPORT.

The college of St. Mary was founded here upon the appropriation of the pariſh church, which was obtained by one Thomas Draper, 20 Hen. 6. It conſiſted of a warden and four Secular chaplains, and was granted, 13 Eliz. to Edmund Downing and Peter Aſhton.

BRIDGENORTH.

In this town was an houſe of Grey friers, founded (as Speed ſaith) by John Talbot earl of Shrewſbury, temp. Hen. 6. and valued at 4 l. per ann. which was granted, 36 Hen. 8. to John Beaumont.

SHREWSBURY.

"Here is an hoſpital of St. Chadde. The ſociety of the mercers of Shrewſbury maintain the "hoſpital[f]." See the foundation and dotation of the fraternity or gild of the Holy Trinity for the clothiers in Shrewſbury, in order to the maintenance of a chaplain and ſeveral poor men[g]. This was in being A. D. 1686. and probably is ſo at this time.

DRAYTON in Hales [b].

Roger de Northbrough biſhop of Coventry and Litchfield, and lord keeper of the great ſeal, is ſpoken of by biſhop Godwin, as having done no publick act (that he could hear of) to perpetuate his memory. But about A. D. 1354. he took out the king's licence to found an houſe of Carmelite or White friers in this place; tho', from my meeting with nothing further of it, I queſtion whether any ſuch houſe was ever actually founded.

GLASTONBURY, olim Avallonia.

THIS place is reckoned in our old hiſtorians, as the moſt ancient Chriſtian church in Great Britain, founded, as they ſay, by Joſeph of Arimathea, about thirty one years after our bleſſed Saviour's paſſion. Here was alſo accounted to have been the firſt regular congregation of monks, gathered, as we are told, by one of the St. Patricks, A. D. 435. This monaſtery was afterward moſt liberally endowed by the munificence of Ina[a], Edmund the elder and other Saxon kings and nobles, and had Benedictine monks introduced by the care of St. Dunſtan A. D. 954. It was dedicated to the bleſſed Virgin Mary, and valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 3311 l. 7 s. 4 d. ob. per ann. Dugd. 3508 l. 13 s. 4 d. ob. q. Speed[b]. The ſite of this ſtately abby was granted, 1 Ed. 6. to Edward duke of Somerſet; and 1 Eliz. to Sr. Peter Carew.

[a] The learned and judicious biſhop Stillingfleet, in his Origines Britannicae, London 1685. p. 26, 27. etc. contends for king Ina's being founder of this monaſtery. He thinks here might be a very ancient church in the Britiſh times, but that there is no good ground for what is ſaid in the Monaſticon and other writers of Joſeph of Arimathea, St. Patrick, or St. David's being ever here. And Collier, in his Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, vol. i. p. 8. follows him. See alſo archbiſhop Uſher's Antiquities of the Britiſh churches, chap. ii. and vi.

CONGRESBURY.

It is reported in one of the Glaſtonbury chronicles [a], that St. Fagan and St. Deruvian founded the ſee of the biſhop of Somerſetſhire at this place in the year 167. and that it continued here ſix hundred years [b], till it was removed to Wells. But Capgrave ſaith [c], that this was a very ſolitary place, and had its name and renown from a Religious hermite called Cungar, who by the gift of king Ina [a] had the adjacent territory; and here, about the year 711 [b]. founded a collegiate church for twelve canons, to the honor of the Holy Trinity, which, as is ſaid, was farther endowed by K. Edgar. This village was given by K. Edward the Confeſſor to the biſhopric of Wells [c]. See more in Dr. Archer's account, etc. p. 655.

K. OSRIC built, A. D. 676. a nunnery here, which being deſtroy'd by the Danes, king Offa, about the year 775. is ſaid to have rebuilt the church of St. Peter, and to have placed Secular canons therein, who ſoon became famous [d]. But king Edgar removed them, and in their room fixed here, about A. D. 970. an abbat and convent of Benedictine monks. Theſe continued here till the general diſſolution; but John biſhop of Wells having obtained a grant of this city and monaſtery from William the Conqueror, and finely new built the church of St. Peter, he made it his cathedral, and aſſumed the title of biſhop of Bath temp. Hen. 1 [e]. and thenceforth the monks were govern'd by a prior. The yearly revenues of this monaſtery were valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 617 l. 2 s. 3 d. Dugd. 695 l. 6 s. 1 d. ob. Speed; and the ſite of it was granted, 34 Hen. 8. to Humfrey Collins.

It is ſaid that king Ina[e], about the year 704. founded a collegiate church here to the honor of St. Andrew the apoſtle, and removed hither the epiſcopal ſeat from Congreſbury; but other hiſtorians with greater certainty affirm, that Athelmus was the firſt biſhop of Wells, placed here by king Edward and Plegmund archbiſhop of Canterbury A. D. 909[f]. The old number of canons or prebendaries here were increaſed by biſhop Giſo temp. Will. Conq. who placed a head over them, then called a provoſt[g]; but afterward by biſhop Robert[h], about the year 1139. the deanry and other dignities were founded, and the eſtates of the church divided into prebends, not much different from what they are at this time. The revenues of the biſhopric were valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 1939 l. 12 s. 8 d. in the whole, and at 1843 l. 19 s. 4 d. per ann. clear. But many alienations having been ſince made from it, they are now valued in the king's books at 533 l. 1 s. 3 d. per ann. only. The common revenues of the church were then valued at 897 l. 5 s. 11 d. per ann. in the whole, and clearly at 729 l. 3 s. 4 d. which is the preſent valuation of them. The members of this church are, the biſhop, dean, precentor, chancellor, three archdeacons, (viz. of Wells, Bath, and Taunton) treaſurer, ſubdean, fifty-nine prebendaries, organiſt, four prieſt vicars, eight lay vicars, ſix choriſters, etc.

BRUTON, Brewetone or Briwedon.

About the year 1005. Algar[a], or rather Ailmer[b], or Aethelmare earl of Cornwall, is ſaid to have built here a Religious houſe for monks, who were changed into Black canons by William Moyne or Mohun earl of Somerſet, temp. R. Steph[c]. This priory was turned into an abby in the beginning of the reign of K. Henry 8. by the procurement of the then prior William Gilbert or Giles[d], biſhop of Megara and ſuffragan to the biſhop of Bath and Wells[e], who was a great benefactor to the buildings of this monaſtery, which was dedicated to the bleſſed Virgin Mary, and rated, 26 Hen. 8. at 439 l. 6 s. 8 d. per ann. Dugd. 480 l. 17 s. 2 d. Speed. About the year 1150 [f]. William Fitz Walter lord of this town (where the famous hermite St. Wulfric had his cell, died, and was buried) began here an houſe for Regular canons, which he intended to have endowed well, but it ſeems not to have been ever finiſhed.

[f] Gervaſe of Cant. places this foundation in A. D. 1146: But St. Wulfric did not die till 1154. And his legend ſpeaks of it as begun not long before his death. 'Tis ſaid that he propheſied, it never ſhould be finiſhed, and that the canons ſhould not proſper here. Leland Collect. vol. i. p. 445, 446. Hen. Huntingdon in libro De ſanctis Angliae ſaith, St. Wulfric's Haſelberg is in Dorſetſhire. "Wil-"ſonus in Wiltonia locat," uti J. Bollandus in Vita S. Wlfrici, 20 Febr. But the biſhop of Bath's determining the diſpute about his body, argues for the place where he lived being within his juriſdiction; and Leland, Itin. vol. ii. p. 45. ſaith, it was at Haſilberge, one mile from Crookhorn.

[g] Not in Devonſhire, as the Monaſticon and Baronage.

[h] In Dugd. Baron. vol. i. p. 451. William de Curcy, ſewer to king Henry 2. is ſaid to have founded this houſe. But in page 288. Hugh Nevil is expreſly ſaid to have founded it. And by his being placed firſt in the record in the Monaſticon, he ſhould ſeem to have been founder; but according to the Baronage, vol. i. p. 288. he did not flouriſh, nor did this eſtate come into that family till the time of king Henry 3. In Martin's extracts out of the Eton college muniments, it is ſaid that William de Faleſia and Geva his wife gave this church with ſeveral lands to L'onley; and there are ſeveral confirmations of their grant; but nothing is there recorded to have been given by William de Curcy the king's ſewer, but a mill at Northampton. So that William de Faleſia and his wife ſeem to me to have moſt right to be accounted founders. Robert Fitz Pain was patron A. D. 1326.

Benedictine monks were ſent from thence to ſettle as a cell to that foreign houſe, which continued till the ſuppreſſion of alien priories[a], and then was given by king Henry 6. to his college at Eaton. It was accounted worth 58 l. per ann. in the valuation taken of the lands belonging to Eaton college, 26 Hen. 8.

MINCHIN BUCKLAND[g].

In the reign of king Henry 2. William de Erlegh founded here an houſe of Regular canons, who, having killed his ſteward and done other unjuſtifiable acts, were ſuppreſſed and removed to other houſes. But that king granted all their lands to the Knights Hoſpitalars A. D. 1180. upon condition that they ſhould place here all the ſiſters of their order, which before lived in ſeveral of their Preceptories. This ſeems to have been complied with, and the nuns here had at firſt great dependance upon the Knights [a], but afterward they diſengaged themſelves and became a diſtinct [b] priory or hoſpital of nuns of the order of St. Auguſtine. This was dedicated to St. John Baptiſt [c], and endowed, at the ſuppreſſion, with 223 l. 7 s. 4 d. per ann. Dugd. Speed. and the ſite of it was granted, 36 Hen. 8. to William earl of Eſſex, James Rockby, etc. There was alſo here a preceptory of Knights of St. John of Jeruſalem, whoſe houſe was granted, 36 Hen. 8. to Alexander Popham and William Halley [d].

" THERE is a fre chapelle in the toune, the bakſide whereof cummith to the ryver ſide even " hard bynethe the bridge. I have hard ſay, That many yeres ſyns, there was a nunry wher " this chapelle ys [a]." This was probably at firſt an hoſpital: For one William Dacus [b] gave the White hall in Ivelcheſter, and other houſes and lands for founding an hoſpital for poor travellers to the honor of the Bleſſed Trinity, between A. D. 1217. and 1220 [c]. In the ninth year of king Edward 2. this is called the Hoſpital of the Holy Trinity. But before the ſeventeenth year of that king, it was probably changed into an houſe of Religious women under the government of a prioreſs, who was ſtyled " Prioriſſa de Alba aula in Ivelcheſter," in pat. 17 Ed. 2. p. 2. m. 6. dorſo. But ſome time before the Reformation it dwindled into a free chapel [d].

WELLS,

WELLS, Vicars college.

Walter de Hull canon of Wells[a] gave two meſſuages and lands in Wells, that the thirteen chantry prieſts, who officiated in the cathedral, might live in common together. And Rad. de Salopia biſhop of Bath and Wells made ſtatutes dated 7 Id. Ap. A. D. 1347. for their due regulation. But being deſirous to improve this deſign, the ſaid biſhop began, the next year, a fair college for the habitation of the vicars and choriſters of the cathedral church, got them incorporated, and augmented their places with ſome lands of his own[b] and others, which he obtained from the feoffees of the ſaid Walter de Hulle[c]. This college was afterwards much improved by biſhop Bekington and his executors[d], and was found to be endowed, 26 Hen. 8. with lands and other revenues in common to the value of 72 l. 10 s. 9 d. ob. per ann[e]. [a] Leland, Itin. vol. vii. p. 73. aſcribes the foundation of this houſe to Sr. Henry Gant; and ſaith it was intended for a college of prieſts, etc. but Maurice's charter is extant in the regiſters at Wells.

[b] Anſelm biſhop elect of St. David's is one of the witneſſes to Robert de Gurnay's confirmation of his uncle's charter, and A. D. 1229. was the year of his election.

[c] The governor of this houſe is ſometimes called prior, and the houſe itſelf a priory of the order of St. Auſtin, as Leland. Collect. vol. i. p. 85.

WHITE FRIERS.

“ The priory of the Carmelites was the faireſt of all the houſes of the friers in Briſtol, and ſtood on the right rype of the From, over againſt the Key” [a]. Mr. Speed ſaith that it was founded A. D. 1267. by K. Edward 1. perhaps when prince of Wales. It was granted, after the diſſolution, by K. Henry 8. for the uſe of the city.

THE AUGUSTINE FRIERS.

“ The Auguſtine friers houſe was hard by the Temple gate, within it on the north weſt” [b]. It was founded by Sr. Simon and Sr. William Montacute [c], about the beginning of the reign of K. Edward 2. and was granted, 35 Hen. 8. to Maurice Dennis.

BURTON'S Almſhouſe,

In the long row near St. Thomas ſtreet was founded A. D. 1292. by Simon Burton merchant [d], and ſeveral times mayor of Briſtol, who is buried in it [e]. Sixteen poor people have now their dwelling there, but no allowance, except out of the poor's rates.

St. MARGARET'S.

St. BARTHOLOMEW'S Hoſpital.

An hoſpital dedicated to St. Bartholomew, not far from the Grey friers, without Froom gate [g]. This houſe, with all the lands, etc. thereto belonging, was by licence from K. Henry 8. anno regni .. purchaſed by the executors of Robert Thorn of Sr. Thomas Weſt knt. lord La Warre patron and founder, George Croft maſter, and the brethren and ſiſters of the ſaid hoſpital, and conveyed to the mayor, burgeſſes and commonalty of the city, for erecting a free grammar ſchool in purſuance of the will of the ſaid Robert Thorn, and is ſtill applied to that uſe.

St. SEPULCHRE'S.

“ Where now St. Laurence church is, was ſumtime a church, as is ſaid, S. Sepulchri, where was a nunnery” [h].

HOLY TRINITY Hoſpital.

An hoſpital dedicated to the Holy Trinity, hard within Lawford's gate [i]. This hoſpital is ſaid to have been founded by John Barſtaple merchant and burgeſs of Briſtol, anno 4 Hen. 5. for ſix poor men and ſix poor women, and a prieſt to officiate to them. But here was certainly ſome foundation before his time, tho' probably not fully ſettled. I can't find any valuation of this hoſpital 26 Hen. 8. But it was happily preſerved at the Reformation, and granted by queen Elizabeth, anno regni 20. to the mayor and corporation of Briſtol, who have ſo carefully improved the revenues, that there are now twenty-four women and ten men in it, having three ſhillings per week each; and the vicar of St. Philip's, in which pariſh this hoſpital is, hath 8 l. per ann. to officiate to them.

TEMPLE STREET Hoſpitals.

Under the Tucker's hall is an ancient hoſpital ſuppoſed to have been founded by the Tucker's company, wherein ſix poor people have their dwellings, and twenty ſhillings per ann. each from the ſaid company.

And under the Weaver's hall, in the ſame ſtreet, is another very ancient hoſpital for four poor women, who have about one ſhilling per week each from the Weaver's company.

WITHOUT TEMPLE GATE,

Was and is an hoſpital, "called Roger Magdalen's of Nonney, which was founder of it.[a]" It belongs now to the pariſh of St. Mary Redcliff, and is inhabited by eleven poor people, but hath no endowment.

REDCLIFF HILL.

An almſhouſe or hoſpital was founded here by William Cannings (five times mayor of Briſtol [b]) A. D. 1442. which is yet in being, and inhabited by ſeventeen poor people, but hath no endowment.

LYONS, alias Lewin's Mede-ſtreet Hoſpital.

This is ſaid to have been founded about A. D. 1460. by William Spencer executor to William Cannings aforeſaid, with the effects of the ſaid William Cannings. It now belongs to the pariſh of St. James's, thirteen of whoſe poor have their dwellings there.

St. MICHAEL'S HILL.

The almſhouſe, with the chapel here, was founded A. D. 1504. by John Foſter, to the honor of God and the three kings of Colleign [c], for one prieſt, eight poor men and five poor women; and augmented by John Eſterfield and John Walſhe his executors. It is yet in being, under the government of the corporation, and ſo well endowed, that twenty three poor people in it have 2 s. 6 d. per week each.

The Rev. Dr. Cox Macro's mſ. 12. ii. 16. a. mentions an hoſpital of St. James in Briſtol, founded by Robert Fitz Harding, founder of the abby.

And in regiſtro Bubwith epiſc. Bath et Wellenſis, I meet "hoſpitale S. Joannis Baptiſtae apud "Redclyff putt."

STAFFORDSHIRE.

STAFFORDSHIRE.

LICHFIELD.

King Oswy[a] is ſaid to have built here, in the year of our Lord 656. or 657. a cathedral church for the biſhop of the Mercians. K. Offa, by the favour of pope Adrian, got it made an archiepiſcopal ſee about A. D. 789. and accordingly a pall was ſent to Eadulf then biſhop, whoſe province was to comprehend the kingdoms of Mercia, and of the Eaſtangles, being the biſhoprics of Hereford, Worceſter, Legaceaſter, Sidnaceaſter, Elmham and Donwich[b]. But in about ten years time Lichfield loſt this honor, and its church and dioceſe were again ſubjected to the metropolitical ſee of Canterbury. Not long after the Conqueſt the town was ſo ſmall as not to be thought a decent place for the reſidence of a biſhop, whereupon the ſee, A. D. 1075[c]. was tranſlated to Cheſter, and from thence, A. D. 1102. to Coventry; but in ſome ſhort time the biſhops ſettled here again; and Roger de Clinton, about the year 1140. not only built a new cathedral church to the honor of St. Mary and St. Chadd, but alſo reſtored and augmented the chapter[d]. For the Lichfield[e] annals aſſert that biſhop Ethelwald, A. D. 822. placed here, under the government of a provoſt, nineteen or twenty canons, half of them prieſts and half deacons, and give us the names of their diſtinct prebends[f]. This the Coventry writers are not willing to allow, but ſay that biſhop Clinton was the firſt that inſtituted any college of canons or prebendaries at Litchfield; and there were before his time belonging to this church only five prieſts, ſerving the five chapels dependant thereupon[g]. But, however this was, there have been for ſeveral hundred years paſt, and ſtill continue founded in this neat cathedral, a biſhop, dean, precentor, chancellor, treaſurer, the four[h] archdeacons of Coventry, Stafford, Salop, and Derby, and twenty ſeven prebendaries, beſides five prieſt vicars, ſeven lay clerks or ſinging men, eight choriſters, and other officers and ſervants. The revenues of this biſhopric were valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 795 l. 17 s. 6 d. in the whole, and 703 l. 5 s. 2 d. clear: And the common revenues of the chapter at 436 l. 10 s. 3 d. in the whole, and at 275 l. 13 s. 2 d. clear.

[a] So Leland. Collect. vol. i. p. 411. ex Tho. Rudburn. Mon. Angl. tom. iii. p. i. p. 216. Mr. Wharton thinks that the biſhopric for the kingdom of Mercia was then founded without any fix'd ſee, 'till S. Cedd or Chadd's time, who firſt ſeated himſelf at Litchfield about 670. Here was ſaid in thoſe ancient times to have been two monaſteries, one called the ſtation of S. Cedd, where Stow now is; the other was the cathedral moſt weſterly ſituated, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

STONE, olim Stanes.

Wolphere[a], the firſt Chriſtian king of Mercia, founded here a college of Secular canons about A. D. 670. in honor of his two ſons Wolfadus and Rufinus[b], whom he had before his converſion barbarouſly murdered with his own hands at or near this place[c]. The canons being diſperſed during the Daniſh wars, about the time of the Conqueſt ſome few nuns ſeem to have been in poſſeſſion of this place, who by the means of Robert de Stafford were changed, temp. Hen. 1. into a convent of Regular canons from Kenelworth, to which houſe this priory was a cell till about the year 1260. when another lord, Robert Stafford, got it to be freed from any ſubjection to Kenelworth, ſave only the right of patronage and a yearly penſion. Theſe Black canons of Stone were endowed, 26 Hen. 8. with 129 l. 2 s. 11 d. per ann[d]. or, after deductions, with clear 119 l. 14 s. 11 d. ob. as in Speed. The ſite was granted, 30 Hen. 8. to George Harpur.

HEHANBURGE[f], Heambure[g], Hamburg[h], or Handbury[i].

Here was an ancient nunnery founded, about the year 680. by Ethelred king of Mercia, and by him put under the government of his ſiſter St. Werburgh, who was buried and enſhrined here; but upon the taking of Ripton by the Danes, A. D. 875. her body was removed to Cheſter; and this monaſtery, being forſaken of the Religious, was then deſtroyed by the Danes.

[c] Their murder by Eniſam of Walton ſeems to be very legendary; for it appears by deeds in the Monaſticon that he was a great benefactor, if not original founder of this priory; altho' the Staffords, being ſuperior lords and alſo great benefactors, retained the honor of being ever eſteemed patrons or founders. [i] Dr. Creſſy places this monaſtery in Northamptonſhire, where occurs no town of a name any thing like this; which ſeems probable to have been this Staffordſhire village, becauſe it agrees with the ſituation deſcribed by Bromton, Decem ſcript. col. 810. and Leland, Collect. vol. ii. p. 373. of being five miles from Ripton or Rependon in Derbyſhire. In Matth. Weſtminſter (edit. Lond. 1567 and 1570.) this monaſtery is miſcalled Mihealbrig. Quaere, Whether this be not the Heanbirig given as a cell to Peterborough abby (as Chron. Saxon. in anno 675. and Dr. Patrick's Hiſt. of Peterborough, p. 237.) for the relation between the founders of both houſes ſeems to make for it.

TRICENGHAM[a], now Trentham[b].

This was another ancient nunnery, whereof St. Werburg was by her brother king Ethelred appointed abbeſs, and here ſhe died A. D. 683[c]. Of this monaſtery nothing more occurs till the reſtauration of it by Randal ſecond earl of Cheſter[d], in the latter part of the reign of king Henry 1[e]. for canons of the order of St. Auguſtin. It was dedicated to the bleſſed Virgin Mary and All Saints[f]; had, about the time of the diſſolution, ſeven Religious, and was then endowed with 121 l. 3 s. 2 d. per ann[g]. in the whole, but the clear value was only 106 l. 3 s. 10 d. as in Dugd. The ſite was granted, 30 Hen. 8. to Charles duke of Suffolk.

STRENSHALL, olim Strenſale or Trenſale.

This ſeems to have been one of the places near the wood of Ardern, which king Egbert, or, as others ſay, K. Ethelwulph gave to St. Modwenna, when ſhe came out of Ireland, in the beginning of the ninth century, and where ſhe built a monaſtery, and preſided in it her ſelf as abbeſs for ſeveral years.

Vide Mon. Angl. vol. i. p. 197. Polychronicon. edit. Gale, p. 254. Capgrave in vitis S. Modwennae et S. Oſithae

TAMWORTH[h].

In the year 914. the famous Mercian Lady Elfleda re-edified this town, and toward the latter end of that century here was a convent[i] of Religious. Eadgitha, a relation of K. Eadgar's, is mentioned to have been abbeſs here[k]: But that St. Editha, the daughter of that king, founded a nunnery here, which was tranſlated to Polleſworth after the Conqueſt[l], is not ſo evident.

[d] Mr. Erdeſwick, Hiſt. of Staffordſhire, p. 10. ſeems to think it was refounded by Hugh Lupus, temp. Will. Rufi; and perhaps it might be only conſiderably augmented by Randal the ſecond; for his charter ſpeaks of him as the Reſtorer rather than the Founder, "Sciatis me dediſſe . . . "ad reſtaurandam quandam abbathiam canonicorum in ec-"cleſia de Trentham." But tho' this houſe be here called Abbathia, it was a priory only, and is ever ſo ſtyled on the records.

[e] For in the charter of K. Henry 2. in the Monaſticon, reference is had to rents paid "temp. Henrici regis avi "noſtri." And in Mr. Le Neve's mſ. there is a confirmation to this priory by biſhop Richard Pache of ſeveral privileges granted to it by biſhop Robert his predeceſſor, who died A. D. 1127.

[f] Not to St. Werburgh, as Leland. Collect. vol. i. p. 64.

[l] So Leland. Collect. vol. i. p. 51. and Mr. Camden in Staffordſhire; but no mention of this in any old hiſtorian, nor in the legends of that St. Edith, nor in the traditionary account of the foundation of Polleſworth (Mon. Angl. vol. i. p. 197.) and if there was any St. Edith that bore relation to this place, it muſt be ſhe that was daughter to K. Egbert and ſiſter to K. Ethelwolf. Polychron. edit. Gale, p. 254.

However, 'tis moſt certain that the church here, dedicated to St. Edith, hath been for a long time [a] collegiate, " having a dean and ſix prebendaries, and every one of theſe hath his ſubſtitute " [or vicar] but I could not learn, ſaith Leland [b], of whoſe erection the college was. Some think " it was a college before the Conqueſt, others that it was of the foundation of Marmion; and " that opinion is more likely to be true. Marmions, without doubt, were the ſucceſſive lords of " the caſtle. The king [c] is at preſent taken as patron of the college." The deanry was valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 21 l. per ann. The firſt prebend or Syryſcot preb. at 3 l. 6 s. 8 d. The ſecond, or W. Ernecote preb. at 8 l. The third or Cotton preb. at 8 l. The fourth or Bonel preb. at 7 l. The fifth or Wigenton at 10 l. The ſixth [d] . . . . And the common revenues at 4 l. 7 s. 8 d.[e] But the college with all the prebends were granted, 23 Eliz. to Edward Downing and Peter Aſhton.

HAMTUNE or Wolverhampton.

AN ancient monaſtery of Religious perſons built, or amply endowed [f] by a devout and charitable widow lady, called Wulfruna, in the year 996. It was in the poſſeſſion of Secular canons at the Conqueſt [g]. K. William Rufus gave this church to Samſon biſhop of Worceſter, who ſettled it upon the prior and convent of his own cathedral, and they held it till the time of king Stephen, when Roger biſhop of Saliſbury got it away from them [h]. But he did not probably enjoy it long, for king Stephen granted it anno regni . . to the biſhop of Cheſter and the church of Litchfield; and it was again in the hands of Secular canons till the famous Petrus Bleſenſis, who was dean, reſigned it into the hands of Hubert archbiſhop of Canterbury, that he might build an abby here for monks of the Ciſtertian order, which he began to do about 5 Joannis. But it ſeems never to have been finiſhed or fully ſettled: For we find the Seculars in poſſeſſion again not long after [i], and they ſtill continue ſo. This church was accounted one of the king's free chapels; was dedicated to St. Mary and St. Peter, and, with the collation of the prebendaries, was annexed by king Edward 4. to the deanry of Windſor. The deanry was valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 38 l. per ann. and five [k] prebends, as follows, viz. Wobaſton preb. 7 l. 13 s. 4 d. clear. Worteſley preb. 4 l. 13 s. 4 d. Codſal preb. 5 l. 6 s. 8 d. Perton preb. 5 l. 13 s. 4 d. and Pemeford preb. 4 l. 13 s. 4 d. But in the ſeventh year of king Edward 6. a grant was made to John duke of Northumberland of the college of Wolverhampton, and of ſeven prebends thereto belonging, viz. of Wolverhampton, Hatherton, Wilnall, Fetherſton, Halton, Monmore, Stonwall alias Kinewaſton, and Wobaſton. But theſe coming again into the crown by the attainder of the ſaid duke, queen Mary, anno regni 1, refounded the dean and prebendaries, and endowed them with all the manors, lands, etc. formerly belonging to the college, free chapel, and deanry of Wolverhampton, amounting, as then rated, to 113 l. 13 s. 0 d. q. by the year. And when ſome queſtions were afterwards raiſed about the poſſeſſions of this church, K. James 1. anno regni 18. confirmed and ſettled them, and made the famous Marcus Antonius de Dominis archbiſhop of Spalatto and dean of Windſor, dean of Wolverhampton, and prebendary of the firſt prebend, viz. of Wolverhampton, and ſeven other clergymen, (amongſt whom were Joſeph Hall [l], Gabriel Goodman, and Dr. Thomas Goad) were named to ſeven other prebends [m].

[b] So the Burton annals: But Polychronicon, Bromton, etc. place it in the year 1002. And the charter of K. Eadred (Mon. Angl.) is dated as high as A. D. 949. but this (if genuine) muſt be underſtood only of the firſt deſign, or beginning of the foundation.

[c] An Iriſh ſaint, who lived as an anchorite ſeveral years near this place, in an iſland of the Trent called Andredeſy, (as Capgrave in vita) and was buried there; but being afterwards enſhrined in this abby, it ſeems from thence to have been called Modwenneſtow, in Leland. Collect. vol. ii. p. 408.

[e] This dean and chapter were required by their charter to lay out more in alms, and towards repairing highways yearly, than this king's other new foundations in the cathedrals of Rocheſter, Briſtol, Cheſter, Carliſle, Peterborough, or Ely, as Rymer, vol. xv. p. 77, 78. and therefore perhaps might be better endowed.

[f] Mr. Graves, in the Appendix to Hemingius p. 640. hath well obſerved, that the boundaries of the lands here aſcribed to this Burton, ought rather to be aſcribed to "Burton on the Water in Glouceſterſhire", and are verbatim in the Eveſham regiſter, to which that village belonged.

But this ſeems not to have taken effect, for this cell coming to the crown upon the general ſuppreſſion of theſe kind of houſes was given by king Henry 5. to Tong college in Shropſhire, and ſo continued till the ſurrender of the ſame, it being granted as parcel of the poſſeſſions of that late college, 1 Ed. 6. to Sr. Richard Mannors.

THE church of this place is mentioned in the charter of K. Stephen, and the bull of pope Lucius, as given to the biſhop and churches of Coventry and Lichfield in the ſame manner with Wolverhampton and Stafford, which were notoriouſly royal free chapels or colleges, which makes it probable that this of Pencris might be of the ſame nature. The advowſon of the church and the manor were granted by one Hugh Huoſe [b], to the archbiſhop of Dublin and his ſucceſſors; which gift was confirmed by K. John, anno regni 17. And in proceſs of time that archbiſhop was always dean of this church, and had the collation of all the prebendaries [c], who were in number thirteen [d] about 26 Hen. 8. when they were valued at 106 l. 15 s. 0 d [e]. It was dedicated to St. Michael [f] the archangel, and was granted, 2 Ed. 6. to John earl of Warwick; and 4 et 5 Phil. et Mar. to William Riggs and William Buckbird.

A church, having peculiar privileges and cuſtoms belonging to it, as ancient as the time of K. Henry 1[f]. which with its prebends was given by king Stephen to the church of Lichfield, but afterwards became a royal free chapel, and was enjoyed by Secular canons[g] 26 Hen. 8. The lord biſhop of Coventry and Lichfield was accounted titular dean, but enjoyed no profits, and there were four prebends, viz. RADMORE.

In a ſolitary place of this name, within the foreſt of Canoc, ſeveral Religious people got together into a ſociety in the beginning of the reign of king Stephen, and about the year 1140[i]. procured a grant of the hermitage, wherein they had fixed themſelves, and of ſome adjacent lands from the empreſs Maud and K. Stephen, toward the founding and endowing of a monaſtery, to the honor of the bleſſed Virgin Mary. Thus it was at firſt only a priory, but, at the inſtance of the ſaid empreſs their foundreſs and patroneſs, the Religious here changed their habits, and became Ciſtertian monks; and this place was made an abby. But this being a very inconvenient place, after thirteen years, viz. A. D. 1154. the monks were removed to Stanley in Ardern, alias Stonely in Warwickſhire, where ſee more.

[b] There is reaſon to think from the charter of Gerard Stafford fil. Brieni (Monaſt. vol. ii. p. 317.) that he was the true founder, and brought theſe canons hither from Darby or Darley, and fixed them here upon land, which he held of the biſhop of Lichfeld as chief lord; and from thence might compliment him with the title of founder. 'Tis obſervable, that the Lichfield annals (both in Mon. Angl. vol. iii. p. i. p. 218. and Angl. Sacr. vol. i. p. 435.) only ſay, that this biſhop founded this church "de epiſ-"copio." No doubt but he was a great encourager of the building of this monaſtery, and had a great liking to it; for when he reſigned his biſhopric, he became a canon here, ended his days, and was buried here: But Gerard ſeems to me more likely to have been the real founder.

LICHFIELD, St. John's.

At the very ſouth end of the town was the houſe, college [a], priory [b] or hoſpital of St. John Baptiſt, where was a maſter and fellows [c] as Religious men, but Leland could not learn who was the founder. Biſhop Godwin ſaith that he hath read, that Roger biſhop of Lichfield was the original founder; which of them doth not yet appear; but I rather chuſe to aſcribe it to one of the Rogers in the time of K. Henry 3. than to Roger Clinton in K. Stephen's. Biſhop Smith [d], in the days of K. Henry 7. began a new foundation at this place, ſetting up a maſter there with two prieſts and ten poor men in the hoſpital. K. Henry 7. was a great benefactor to this new foundation. It was valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 8 l. 15 s. per ann. as Dugd. Speed, which was the clear value, and at 46 l. 18 s. 1 d. as mſ. Rec. in off. Primit. which was the total value, when there were thirteen poor perſons, a bailiff, ſchool maſter, and uſher here maintained. It continues to this day, and, as I am informed, there are now a maſter, and fourteen poor men belonging to it. The biſhop of Coventry and Lichfield is their viſitor.

Upon the ſuppreſſion of the priory of Stone, all the monuments of the family of the Staffords were removed from thence to this conventual church, where they were not preſerved. DUNWICH, olim Domnoc or Dommoc[b].

THE epiſcopal ſeat for the kingdom of the Eaſt Angles was placed here upon the conſecration of Felix the firſt biſhop, about A. D. 630[c]. And upon the diviſion of this dioceſe, A. D. 673. the biſhops of Suffolk continued their reſidence here, till the whole kingdom was re-united under the biſhops of Elmham in the tenth century[d]. After which here was a cell of monks, who were ſubordinate to Eye; but this, with many other churches and Religious houſes, was ſome ages ſince ſwallowed up by the ſea[e].

BURGH CASTLE, olim Cnobhereſburg[f].

Upon the firſt preaching of Chriſtianity to the Eaſt Angles, about A. D. 630. king Sigebert gave to Furſaeus, (an holy man, who came out of Ireland) a place near this caſtle or city, whereon to found a monaſtery, which was augmented both in buildings and revenues by K. Anna.

[b] The ancient Domnoc is ſaid to be now Felixſtow or Fylcheſtow in Colnes hundred, by Leland, in his Collect. vol. i. p. 349. and vol. iii. p. 44 and 69. but probably without good authority.

[e] Leland. Collect. vol. iii. p. 26. The prior of Eye was patron or proprietary of all the churches in Dunwich, as appears from the regiſters of inſtitutions in the biſhop's regiſtry at Norwich, and Mon. Angl. vol. i. p. 356.

[f] Several hiſtorians, ancient and modern, have confounded this monaſtery, where Furſaeus lived, with another monaſtery founded by this ſame K. Sigebert, wherein he turn'd monk, and whence he was fetch'd out to that fatal battle wherein he loſt his life. Some have thought that Cnobereſburg was the ſame with Betricheſword or Bury S. Edmund (notes on laſt edition of Engliſh Camden:) But to this laſt place Bede's deſcription, viz. that it was "maris vicinitate "amoenum," will by no means agree. By that ſituation, and the notice taken of it by K. Anna, it might more probably be fixed at Blithburgh, where that king was buried; but Blithburgh is mentioned under its preſent name by the Ely hiſtorian, who in a page or two before mentions alſo this Religious houſe at Cnobhereſburgh. So that theſe alſo ſeem to be different places.

Vide Bedae Hiſt. Eccl. lib. iii. cap. 19.

BEDERICSWORTHE or Eadmundeſtow, now Bury St. Edmund.

Sigebert king of the Eaſt Angles, about the year 633. quitted his crown and took upon him a Religious life in a monaſtery which he had founded here[a]; but after the death of that prince we have no certain account of the ſtate of this place, tho' probably (as far as the interruptions of the Daniſh wars would permit) ſome ſort of Religious perſons continued to live together and to officiate in the church here. For hither, as to a place of ſome note the body of St. Edmund the king was tranſlated from the obſcure wooden chapel at Hoxne, A. D. 903. Immediately whereupon the town changed its name, and ſeveral Secular prieſts ſettling here, built a new church to the honor of that royal martyr. They were at firſt not above ſeven or eight in number, but increaſed in a few years to be nineteen, viz. fourteen prieſts and five deacons, all having their ſeveral prebends, and became a perfect college about A. D. 925. when K. Ethelſtan is ſaid to be their founder[b]. This minſter from thenceforward was augmented in privileges and revenues by king Edmund, by Theodred biſhop of London, and other benefactors; but A. D. 1020. king Canute expelled the Secular clerks, and placed herein a convent of Benedictine monks from Hulm in Norfolk. Theſe he and others endowed with ſo many eſtates, royalties and immunities, that this abby of St. Edmund was inferior to very few in revenues, and to none in England as to ſituation, buildings, eccleſiaſtical exemptions, or civil franchiſes and liberties. In the valuation of 26 Hen. 8. its yearly income was computed at 1659 l.[c] 13 s. 11 d. ob. Dugd. 2336 l. 16 s. 0 d. Speed. The ſite was granted, 2 Eliz. to John Eyer[d].

STOKE[a] next Neyland.

As early as the middle [b] of the tenth century here was a monaſtery of ſome note, and many good donations thereunto made by earl Alfgar, and afterwards by his two daughters, Aethelfled and Aegelfled; this being the burial place of that noble family, and perhaps founded by ſome of them.

Vide teſtamenta Aethelfledae et Aegelfledae filiarum com. Aelfgari, ex cartis Harleyanis evulgata [Saxonice et Latine,] inter notas in Theſauri Lingg. vet. ſeptentrionalium Conſpectum Wottonianum, Lond. 1708. 8vo.

HOXNE or Hoxon.

Theodred biſhop of London (who ſeems to have been biſhop of Elmham [c] alſo, and to have lived at this place [d]) by his will bequeathed lands at Horham, etc. to the minſter or church of St. Aethelbright here [e], about the year 950. This Religious houſe was probably demoliſh'd or deſerted ſoon after, nothing about it having yet occurred. Biſhop Herbert, in the beginning of the reign of K. Henry 1. gave the pariſh church of St. Peter here [f], as alſo the chapel where St. Edmund the king was ſlain, to his cathedral church of Norwich; and, A. D. 1130 [g]. Maurice of Windſor and Egidia his lady gave a chapel of St. Edmund, with ſeveral lands hereabout, that therein might be placed a convent of monks to pray for the ſoul of Ralph the Dapifer, who had new built the ſame from the ground. Accordingly, till the diſſolution, here was a priory of Benedictine monks cell to Norwich. It was aliened to Sr. Richard Greſham knt. 38 Hen. 8. being then valued at 18 l. 1 s. 0 d. per ann. above all reprizes.

MYNDHAM or Mendham.

The above mentioned biſhop Theodred gave alſo by his ſaid will [h] to the church of this place ſeveral lands in this and the adjacent towns, by which it ſeems to have been more than parochial an hundred years before the Conqueſt. How long it continued ſo, is not at preſent known, but in king Stephen's [i] time, upon the iſland of Hurſt or Bruninghurſt in this pariſh, William the ſon of Roger de Huntingfield founded a Cluniac priory, ſubordinate to Caſtleacre in Norfolk. It was dedicated to the bleſſed Virgin Mary, and granted, 2 et 3 Phil. et Mar. to Richard Freſton and Ann his wife.

SUDBURY.

About the year 970. Aitheric [a] gave one moiety of Northoo to St. Eadmund's Bury, and the other moiety to St. Gregory's in Sudbury. The Religious here are alſo mentioned in the will of Ethelflede [b] in the latter part of this tenth century. Nothing more occurs of this church than of its being only parochial, appropriated to the nuns of Eaton [c] in Warwickſhire till A. D. 1374. when it was purchaſed of them by Simon de Sudbury then biſhop of London, and John de Sudbury his brother, (ſons of Nigell Thebaud and Sara his wife) who the next year [d] procured the ſame to be made collegiate, and founded, in the place [e] where their father's houſe ſtood, a goodly college for ſix Secular prieſts [f], of whom one was to be warden or maſter. It was endowed, 26 Hen. 8. with 122 l. [g] 18 s. 3 d. per ann. ſurrendered [h] 36 Hen. 8. and the ſame year granted to Sr. Thomas Paſton.

HADLEIGH.

Here was, as is ſaid, a monaſtery in the Saxon times [i].

CLARE.

A famous earl named Eluric or Alfric filius Withgari (who lived in the reigns of Canute, Hardecanute, and Edward, kings of England) founded the church of St. John Baptiſt [k] in the caſtle here, and therein placed ſeven Secular canons. Which church, with all its prebends and endowment, Gilbert de Clare gave, A. D. 1090. to the monaſtery at Bec in Normandy, and thereby it became a cell of Benedictine monks to that abby, until the year 1124. when his ſon Richard removed them to Stoke.

CRETING.

There are four contiguous pariſhes of this name in Suffolk[a], viz. St. Mary's, St. Olave's, All Saints, and St. Peter's, and at the two firſt ſeem to have been two diſtinct alien priories of the Benedictine order. The manor of Gratinges, which was that of St. Olave, was given by Robert earl of Morton, temp. Will. Conq[b]. to the abby of Greſtein in Normandy, and was taken care of by ſome monks belonging thereunto, or by their agent the prior of Wilmynton in Suſſex, their chief cell in England. K. Edward 3. granted this to Tydeman de Lymbergh a merchant, and afterward the abbat and convent ſold it by the king's licence to Sr. Edmund de la Pole. The other, viz. Creting St. Mary's, and which was moſt uſually ſtyled the priory of Creting, was cell to the abby of Bernay[c] in Normandy; and, after the ſuppreſſion of theſe foreign houſes, was by king Henry 6. made part of the endowment of Eton college.

[a] Speed and Weaver make Peter de Rupibus biſhop of Wincheſter founder, by miſtake, probably, becauſe he was founder of Locus S. Edwardi, or Nettely in Hampſhire, by ſome called Edwardſtow. See Godwin in vita.

[b] This was a place of note early in the Saxon times; for here were buried Anna the firſt Chriſtian king of the Eaſt Angles, and Jurmine or Fermine his ſon, as Leland, Collect. vol. i. p. 590. Camden, Weaver, etc.

[c] So cart. 22 Ed. 1. and the Norwich regiſters. But the editors of the Monaſticon ſtyle them Premonſtratenſians, vol. i. p 1044. and place this priory among thoſe of this order, (vol. ii. p. 593.) which was not inſtituted till many years after the death of king Henry 1.

[d] So generally accounted: But their revenues were valued ſeparately, they preſented to their own livings, and in every thing ſeemed a diſtinct body, only the abbat and convent of St. Oſith nominated the prior of Bliburgh.

[e] Leland. Itin. vol. viii. p. 75. But who founded this houſe is uncertain. Weaver makes K. Henry 1. founder, and Richard Beauveys biſhop of London, co-founder. But the patronage was not in the crown, as it would have been, if of royal foundation. And nothing of this work is aſcribed to that biſhop by either Wharton, Godwyn, or Newcourt, in their lives of him. Leland, Collect. vol. i. p. 62. ſaith, " Abbas S. Oſithae fundator primus et modernus." And probably the abbat and convent of St. Oſith might build the houſe, after king Henry 1. gave the church to them: But they were not ſole patrons, for they only nominated the prior, and he was preſented by others, viz. firſt by the Claverings, then by the Audeles, then by the Uffords, and laſt by the lords Dacres, (ſee the Norwich regiſters) which families ſeem to have been ſucceſſively owners of ſome conſiderable eſtate thereabouts. Dugdale ſaith, that Sr. John Clavering was, temp R. Ed 2. lord of the manor of Bliburgh, and of the hundreds of Blithing and Wangford, (Dugd. Baron. vol. i. p. 109) and had that privilege probably on account of their anceſtors having been either partly founders or conſiderable benefactors.

[f] Cardinal Wolſey obtained a bull, A. D. 1528. for ſuppreſſing this among other ſmall houſes, and applying the revenues of it toward the endowment of his college at Ipſwich, if the king conſented; but (by what means I don't find) his deſign was fruſtrated as to this, which continued till the general ſuppreſſion. Sr. Richard Gipps, in his Suffolk collections, ſpeaks of a regiſter of this priory in Greſham college library, quaere. Stevens, vol. ii. p. 248. hath placed this houſe in Staffordſhire.

[g] The foundation deed in the Monaſticon is dated this year. And in libro inſtitut. Norvic. vol. viii. f. 125. b. it is ſaid, " Compertum eſt quod moniales de Redlingfield tenuerunt " in proprios uſus eccleſiam parochialem de Redlingfield " ab A. D. 1120."

STOKE by Clare.

Richard de Clare earl of Hertford removed, A. D. 1124. the monks of Bec, whom his father had placed in the caſtle of Clare, to this village of Stoke, firſt into the pariſh church of St. Auſtin, and after to a church built by and for them, dedicated to St. John Baptiſt. This alien priory was in after times made deniſon, but A. D. 1415. Edmund Mortimer earl of March, its then founder or patron, procured it to be changed into a college for Secular prieſts, and augmented its revenues ſo as to be ſufficient for the maintenance of a dean, ſix [a] prebendaries, eight vicars, four clerks, ſix choriſters, beſides officers and ſervants. Theſe were valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 324 l. 4 s. 1 d. ob. q. per ann. This collegiate church had the honor to have the famous and learned Matth. Parker, afterwards archbiſhop of Canterbury, for its laſt dean; and it was granted, 2 Ed. 6. to Sr. John Cheeke and Walter Mildmay.

BURY, St. Peter's Hoſpital.

WITHOUT the Riſby [a] gate was built by abbat Anſelm [b], in the latter part of the reign of K. Hen. 1. or beginning of king Stephen's, an hoſpital for the maintenance of prieſts [c] and others, when they grew old and infirm, leprous and diſeaſed [d], to the honor of St. Peter. It was at firſt under the ſole management of the almoner of the abby [e], who afterwards put in ſome Secular prieſt to be maſter [f]. It was valued at 10 l. 18 s. 11 d. ob. per ann. and continued in being A. D. 1551. when a protection was granted to the lazars here; and George Hodgſon, guide of the houſe, was appointed their proctor [g].

WICKHAM SKEYTH.

THIS manor was given, temp. R. Steph [h]. to the abby of St. John at Colcheſter, by a knight of great note in thoſe days, named Robert de Salco Villa, who at laſt turned monk, upon condition that four monks of that houſe ſhould be ſettled here to pray for his ſoul; but in the next reign his ſon Jordan conſented that the Religious ſhould be withdrawn from hence and removed to Colcheſter, where the convent was to be increaſed with four Religious above their old number. However, this manor and church continued in the abby till the general diſſolution.

SIBTON [i].

WILLIAM DE CAYNETO or CHENEY [k], founded A. D. 1149 [l], an abby for Ciſtertian monks here [m], and commended it to the patronage of the bleſſed Virgin Mary. Its yearly revenues, 26 Hen. 8. were rated at 250 l. 15 s. 7 d. ob [n]. But within two years after the abbat and convent granted the ſite and all the eſtates belonging to the monaſtery to Thomas duke of Norfolk, Anthony Rouſe, and Nicholas Hare, moſt of which, after the attainder of the duke of Norfolk, were granted, 1 Ed. 6. to Sr. Antony Denny.

Here was a priory of Cluniac monks[c], cell to Thetford, before the year 1160[d], ſaid to have been founded by Doudo Aſini[a], ſteward to the king's houſhold. It was often ſeiſed, during the wars with France, as alien, but was made deniſon 17 Ric. 2. It was dedicated to St. Mary as ſome[b], and as others, to St. Peter and St. Paul[c]; had yearly revenues, at the ſuppreſſion, reckoned worth 30 l. 9 s. 5 d. Dugd. Speed; and was, together with the monaſtery of Thetford, granted, 32 Hen. 8. to Thomas duke of Norfolk. Here were only a prior and two monks[d].

IPSWICH, St. Peter and St. Paul.

A PRIORY of Black canons dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, and founded [a] in the latter end of the reign of K. Henry 2. or beginning of that of K. Richard 1. by the anceſtors of Thomas Lacy and Alice his wife [b], which was ſuppreſſed by the authority of cardinal Wolſey, March 6. 1527 [c]. who having obtained bulls from the pope [d], and letters patent from the king for the ſite and eſtate belonging to this priory, founded 20 Hen. 8. in the place where it ſtood, a college for a dean, twelve Secular canons, eight clerks, and eight choriſters [e], to the honor of the bleſſed Virgin Mary [f], together with a grammar ſchool, which he deſigned as a nurſery to his great college in Oxford. And for endowment of the ſame he farther procured the poſſeſſions of the late monaſteries of Snape [g], Dodnaſh, Wikes, Horkeſley, Tiptree, Romborough, Felixſtow, Bromehill, Bliburgh and Montjoy. But this noble foundation was ſcarce brought to perfection before the diſgrace of that prelate (who was born in this town) and the ſite of the college, with good part of the lands belonging to St. Peter's monaſtery were granted, 23 Hen. 8. to Thomas Alverde; and 9 Jac. 1. to Richard Percival and Edmund Duffield.

WHERSTED.

In an old deed, ſans date [c], to which Gerard prior of Ipſwich is one of the witneſſes, is mention of the monaſtery of Werveſtede, perhaps ſome ſmall foundation of ſhort continuance, united to the priory of St. Peter and St. Paul in Ipſwich, to whom belonged the church and manor and ſeveral lands in this village.

BURY, St. Savior's [d].

Without the north gate of this town abbat Samſon, and the convent, about the year 1184 [e]. began the eſtabliſhment of a new hoſpital to the honor of our Holy Savior, which was not finiſhed or fully endowed till K. John's time. It was originally founded for a warden, twelve chaplains prieſts, ſix clerks, twelve poor gentlemen, and twelve poor women [f]. In the time of K. Edward 1. here were only ſeven chaplains, and the poor ſiſters were to be diſmiſſed, and in their ſtead old and infirm prieſts to be taken in and maintained [g]. The temporalties and ſpiritualties belonging to this hoſpital extended to one hundred fifty three marks, ten ſhillings and four pence per ann. of which the portion of tithes at Melford was reckoned eighty marks [h]. The ſite was granted, 34 Hen. 8. to Anthony Stringer and John Williams.

IPSWICH, St. Mary Magdalene and St. James.

As early as the beginning of K. John's reign, here was an hoſpital for leprous perſons dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, to which was afterward annexed another houſe of lepers in this town, called St. James's hoſpital; the maſterſhips of both were in the collation of the biſhop of Norwich, and uſually went together with the church of St. Helen, and chapel of St. Edmund the Archbiſhop, or of Pountney, to the ſame appropriated.

DUNWICH TEMPLE.

HERE was formerly an houſe of Knights Templars[d], and they had a fair church here called the Temple of our Lady[e], to which belonged ſeveral lands, rents, and privileges. It ſeems to have paſſed afterward to the Knights Hoſpitalars; for, as parcel of St. John of Jeruſalem, the manor of the Temple in Donwich was granted, 4 Eliz. to Thomas Andrews.

[a] This place being now depopulated and unknown, I think it needful to obſerve, that it was near the river between St. Clement's in Ipſwich and Nacton; for in the extent of the priory manor of Woodbridge, and this manor of Alveſborn thereunto belonging, in the hands of Thomas Carthew eſquire the preſent lord, A. D. 1739. a large piece of land there, called Riſings Paſtures, is ſaid to lie "in hamletta de Alveſburne in paroch. de Hallowtree inter "terram manerii de Alveſburn ex partibus occid. boreal. "et auſtral. et viam proceſſionalem dividentem Nacton et "Alveſborne ex parte orient" And in the inquiſition, 29 Ed 1. ad quod damnum, it might be to give the advowſon of the church of Halghtre, Halwetre, or Hallowtre, and two acres of land to this priory, the jury return that the ſaid advowſon was appurtenant to the manor of Nacton.

In above twenty confirmations of the elections of priors, which are upon the biſhop of Norwich's regiſters, this houſe is always called Letheringham; which is not mentioned by Leland, but is certainly the ſame which he calls Trew (Collect. vol. i p. 62.) both by the name of the firſt founder Bovile; and alſo of the patrons the Wingfields, into which family the advowſon came by a marriage with an heireſs of the Boviles. Temple Cloſe, and other lands and tenements in Giſlingham, late belonging to St. John of Jeruſalem, were granted, 7 Ed. 6. to John Grene and Robert Hall.

CLARE.

Friers Heremites, of the order of St. Auſtin, are ſaid to have been ſeated here A. D. 1248 [f]. probably by Richard de Clare earl of Gloceſter, lord of the honor of Clare, who brought this kind of Mendicants firſt into England. This houſe was granted, 31 Hen. 8. to Richard Friend.

BURY FRIERS.

In the latter end of 1256. or beginning of 1257. upon the vacancy of the abby by the death of Edmund de Walpole, the Grey friers began to fix themſelves in the north weſt part of this town, and, notwithſtanding the utmoſt efforts of the monks, went on for ſome years to build their church and offices, being protected by the bulls of P. Alexander 4. and by writs from K. Henry 3. (who ſtyled himſelf their founder) and ſupported by the intereſt of ſeveral great men, eſpecially Richard earl of Gloceſter, and Gilbert de Preſton [h]. However, after above ſix years ſtruggle and immenſe ſums of money expended in the court of Rome, P. Urban 4. revoked the bulls of his predeceſſor, and ſent a peremptory order to the provincial to remove them out of the town and juriſdiction of Bury, which was done on the eve of St. Edmund, A. D. 1263. when they retired to a place juſt without the bounds [i], beyond the north gate, called

BABWELL, now the Toll-gate,

Which the abbat and convent generouſly gave them [k] to build on; and here they continued till the diſſolution. The ſite of their houſe was granted, 33 Hen. 8. to Antony Harvey.

CAMPSEY or Aſhe college.

In 21 Ed. 3. Maud counteſs of Ulſter (who afterward profeſſed herſelf a nun at Campſey) by the means of Henry earl of Lancaſter her brother, obtained the king's leave to found a collegiate chantry of a warden and four Secular prieſts, who were to live together in a great houſe at Aſhe, but to ſay maſs twice every day in the chapel of the Annunciation of the bleſſed Virgin, within the monaſtery of Campſey. They continued about ſeven years in this manner, but, finding it on ſeveral accounts inconvenient, they were removed [a] to the manor place of Rokehall in

BRUSYARD,

Where was alſo built a chapel of the Annunciation, and the proper offices for the warden and prieſts, A. D. 1354. but upon ſome complaints, and at the inſtance of Lionel duke of Clarence, with the conſent of the king, etc. this college or chantry, with all the lands belonging thereunto, was ſurrendered 4 Oct. 40 Ed. 3. to the uſe of an abbeſs and ſiſters, Nuns Minoreſſes of the order of St. Clare, who remained here till the general ſuppreſſion, when their yearly revenues were eſtimated at 56 l. 2 s. 1 d. per ann. Dugd. John Wolterton and Elyas Byntre clerks, executors of the laſt will and teſtament of Sr. John de Norwich (the ſon of Sr. Walter of Norwich, and grandſon to Sr. John the founder of Raveningham) obtained the king's licence to tranſlate the maſter and eight chaplains from the college of Raveningham, in Norton Soupecors in Norfolk, to the chapel of the bleſſed Virgin Mary within the caſtle of Metingham, and to amortiſe the ſaid caſtle and ſeveral other manors and lands to them (after the death of Margery his mother) and ſo to increaſe their number to thirteen. This tranſlation being retarded by many hindrances, but chiefly by the oppoſition of the nuns of Bungay[f], (who were impropriators of the pariſh church of Metingham) was not fully effected till about 18 Ric. 2. Here were a maſter and eleven fellows about A. D. 1535. when their yearly revenues were valued at 202 l. 7 s. 5 d. ob. Dugd. Speed. All which were granted, 33 Hen. 8. to Thomas Denny.

[a] This is the year fixed in the Chertſey regiſter, and ſeems more agreeable to truth than the year 630. wherein Reyner out of Capgrave's Life of St. Erkenwald would have this abby founded. In Mr. Thynne's collections out of the Chertſey book there is a charter of Frithwald's, dated as low as A. D. 727.

[b] Capgrave makes this Religious perſon, who was firſt abbat here, to be the ſon of Offa king of the Eaſt Angles (which king doth not appear in any good hiſtorian) and father Creſſy will have him to be ſon of the famous king Anna, and gravely cites Bede, Hiſt. lib. iv. cap. vi. for the ſame, which doth not there appear. Quaere, Of the charter of the foundation of this houſe by K. SOUTHWARK, St. Mary Overy.

" HERE was of old time, long before the Conqueſt, an houſe of ſiſters, founded by a maiden " named Mary, and endowed by her with the profits of a ferry croſs the Thames. This houſe " of ſiſters was after converted by Swithen, a noble lady, into a college of prieſts, who in the " place of the ferry builded a bridge of timber, and from time to time kept the ſame in good " reparation; but the ſame bridge was at laſt built of ſtone; and then, in the year 1106. was " this church again founded for canons Regular, by William Pont de le Arche and William " Dauncy knts. Normans." Thus Mr. Stow [a]. Others ſay that this priory was that laſt mentioned year [b] founded by William Giffard biſhop of Wincheſter. It was valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 624 l. 6 s. 6 d. per ann. Dugd. 656 l. 10 s. 0 d. ob. Speed; and the ſite was granted, 36 Hen. 8. to Sr. An-

[a] Survey of London, book iv. chap. i. (and from him Reyner, tract. i. p. 158.) which muſt depend upon the credit of that good old antiquary; nothing having occurr'd yet to me in any book printed or mſ. to ſupport it. There is indeed in Mon. Angl. tom. ii. p. 86. a. K. Stephen's grant of the ſtone houſe in Dougate, which was William de Pontearch's, to the prior and canons. In the Domeſday Book: " Sudrie. Terra epiſc. Baiocenſis. Ipſe epiſcopus habet " in Sudwerche unum monaſterium; et unum aquae fluctum " rex E. tenebat die qua mortuus fuit; qui eccleſiam habebat, " de rege tenebat. Epiſc. dedit eccleſiam primum Ade- " loldo, deinde Radulfo, pro excambio unius domus." Gal. xv. Script. Hiſt. Anglic. p. 762, 763. If monaſterium here denotes any thing more than an ordinary church, it may be thought to mean this Religious houſe, there being no pretence for any other in this borough to claim to be as old as the Confeſſor's time, or indeed as the making of the Domeſday Book A. D. 1083.

[b] In this year Matth. Weſtminſter takes notice that canons Regular, who at that time were but newly come into England, were placed in this church; and the Hiſtoria Major Winton. adds (Angl. Sacr. tom. i. p. 276.) by biſhop Giffard, which is not conſiſtent with what is ſaid there two pages before, that this biſhop abode in exile beyond ſea till the return of archbiſhop Anſelm, which was not till the year 1107. And whether this biſhop was at any other time founder, there is reaſon to doubt, no deed to that effect having yet appear'd, no hint of it in his confirmation of the church of Stoke to this priory, nor in the annals of Waverly abby, that kind of chronicles not being uſually ſilent in an act ſo much to the honor of their founder. But however this be, certainly that is a miſtake in the Mon. Angl. tom. ii. p. 84. of this biſhop's placing Secular canons here. Perhaps Mr. Stow is right in making this biſhop Giffard a good benefactor, and aſcribing the building the body of the church to him.

ſome Black monks of that houſe were fixed here; and this eſtate was ſometimes accounted a diſtinct alien priory, and at other times only a manor belonging to Okeburn, the chief cell in England to that foreign monaſtery. The farm of this place, granted to John Ardern eſquire for ten years at 19 l. per ann. with the reverſion, was granted, 19 Hen. 6. to Eaton college[a]. It was granted, 1 Ed. 4. to the biſhop of Durham; and 5 Ed. 4. the priory of Totingbeke with the advowſon of Stretham were procured by John earl of Worceſter, and with the king's leave ſettled by him on a fraternity, which he had inſtituted in the church of Allhallows Barking[b], near the Tower of London.

MERTON.

Some canons Regular, of the order of St. Auſtin, began, A. D. 1117[c]. to ſettle here under the patronage and by the bounty of Gilbert Norman[d] ſheriff of Surrey, at whoſe requeſt king Henry 1. A. D. 1121. beſtowed the whole town on thoſe Religious, who erected here a fine church and priory to the honor of the bleſſed Virgin Mary. The yearly revenues of this houſe were rated, 26 Hen. 8. at 957 l. 19 s. 5 d. ob. per ann. Dugd. 1039 l. 5 s. 3 d. Speed. The ſite was granted, 5 et 6 Phil. et Mar. toward the endowment of the then new erected monaſtery at Shene.

LAMBETH.

Baldwin archbiſhop of Canterbury being obliged to deſiſt building a college for Secular canons at Hakynton near Canterbury, thought he might purſue a deſign of that nature at forty or fifty miles diſtance, and accordingly began about A. D. 1191. to found a fine chapel here (which he intended to make collegiate, and endow for the maintenance of ſeveral canons or prebendaries) to the honor of his predeceſſor St. Thomas the martyr, which his ſucceſſor archbiſhop Hubert carried on; but when it was juſt finiſhed, A. D. 1199 [d]. he was forced to pull it down to the ground by the papal bulls, which had been obtained at the ſtrong inſtance of the monks of Chriſt Church Canterbury, who were jealous of this new foundation for Seculars ſo near the archiepiſcopal palace. This cauſed great difference between the archbiſhop and thoſe monks; which being put to reference, the arbitrators, A. D. 1202. awarded that the archbiſhop might here at Lambeth, any where but on the foundation of the former chapel, build an ordinary church, and place therein not leſs than thirteen, nor more than twenty Premonſtratenſian canons, and endow the ſame with 100 l. per ann. But this laſt propoſal doth not appear to have taken effect.

[b] Newſted is more agreeable to the Latin Name, but I have not once met with this houſe in Surrey, ſo ſtyled.

[c] Robert de Tregoz, who floriſhed 2 Joannis, confirmed the foundation, which could not be long before, becauſe Thomas Becket was killed but in the year 1171. Godfrey biſhop of Wincheſter, who died A. D. 1204. was a benefactor. And from thence perhaps it might be that this houſe is ſaid to be "De fundatione epiſcopi Winton." in Regiſtr. Winton. ſub A. D. 1312.

[d] "Ordinis S. Auguſtini," Reg. Winton. And in all the charters in the Monaſticon they are ſtyled Regular canons. But in cart. 22 Ed. 1. this houſe is placed among the Premonſtratenſians.

BERMONDSEY, St. Savior's Hoſpital.

This was in being not long after the death of archbiſhop Thomas Becket, for Agnes his ſiſter and Theobald his nephew were benefactors to it, as appears by their deeds in the mſ. Bermondſey regiſter, by William de Preſton.

REYGATE.

Here was a Religious houſe dedicated to the Virgin Mary and the Holy Croſs, in ſome records called an hoſpital [a], and the head ſtyled warden [a], but for the moſt part reckoned as a ſmall monaſtery conſiſting of a prior and ſome few Regular canons [b]. One of the William de Warrens earls of Surrey was the original founder [c]. Before the diſſolution it was valued at 66 l. per ann. as Leland, at 68 l. 16 s. 8 d. clare, as Dugd. and 77 l. 14 s. 11 d. ob. in toto, as mſ. SOUTHWARK, Overy Hoſpital of St. Thomas.

Upon the burning of the monaſtery of St. Mary Overy A. D. 1207. the prior and convent in that ſame year founded an hoſpital near their own houſe, wherein they ſaid maſs till their priory was rebuilt [d]; but A. D. 1228. this hoſpital of St. Mary Overy was removed, with the conſent of Peter de Rupibus biſhop of Wincheſter, to the other ſide of the Burrough for the benefit of better air and water, unto the eſtate of Amitius archdeacon of Surrey, and dedicated to the honor of St. Thomas the martyr [e]. It was accounted of the foundation of the predeceſſors of the biſhops of Wincheſter, and they had the patronage of it [f]. The yearly revenues of this hoſpital, 26 Hen. 8. amounted in the whole to 347 l. 3 s. 4 d. and to 309 l. 1 s. 11 d. clare, at which time here were a maſter and brethren, and three lay ſiſters, and forty beds for poor infirm and impotent people, who had alſo victuals and firing [g]. It was ſurrendered 30 Hen. 8. and the ſite granted 4 Ed. 6. to the major and citizens of London, who in the year 1552. began to repair the ſame for poor, weak, lame and diſeaſed people, and then it was ſtyled, at leaſt for ſome little while, The king's hoſpital in Southwark.

UPON St. Wilfrid's coming [a] among the South Saxons, about A. D. 681. he found here a ſmall monaſtery of five or ſix Religious, under the government of one Dicul a Scottiſh monk [b]. After the Conqueſt, William Warelwaſt biſhop of Exeter [c] obtained of K. Henry I. the grant of this place to himſelf and ſucceſſors [d], who were patrons and viſitors of the Secular canons or prebendaries founded by that biſhop in the choir [e] of the pariſh church here, which was looked upon as a royal free chapel, dedicated to the Holy Trinity [f], and exempt from the ordinary juriſdiction of the biſhop of Chicheſter and his archdeacon [e]. The biſhop of Exeter was in the place of dean or provoſt [g]; the prebends of Waleton, Chedeham, Weſtbrook, Fountington and Apulderham [h], are mention'd in the Lincoln taxation: And ſome ſhew of a collegiate church remained here till the general diſſolution [i]. The ſite of this free chapel or college was granted, 6 Eliz. to Vincent Calmady, and the next year to the dean and chapter of Chicheſter.

TERRING.

HERE ſeems to have been a church or monaſtery built to the honor of St. Andrew in the time of Offa king of the Mercians [e]. And there were ſome remains of it in a free chapel or peculiar juriſdiction, which continued here till the time of king Edward 3.

[b] Leland. Collect. vol. i. p. 86. But in archbiſhop Sancroft's papers "Adolphus dux South Saxiae," is ſaid to have been the firſt founder; and archbiſhop Theobald is ſaid to have been the builder and endower of this college.

[c] Rymer, vol. xv. p. 65.

[d] In the Lincoln Taxation, the deanry was valued at ſixty marks; and the prebends of the treaſurer, chancellor, and precentor, at thirty marks each. Beſides theſe dignities, it is ſaid, there were four prebends in lay fee, Angl. Sacr. tom. i. p. 176. The ſurrender was by the dean, and three canons or prebendaries ſtyled, The penitentiary, ſacriſt, and clerk, as Rymer.

[e] There ſeems to be no reconciling the dates in the Monaſticon, nor aſcertaining from thence the founder, who was either earl Waldhere or Adwlf duke of Suſſex.

CHICHESTER.

Here was, before the Conqueſt, an ancient monaſtery dedicated to St. Peter[a]. Quaere, Whether the "Fratres Ciceſtriae morantes" in king Edwin's charter, A.D. 956[b]. did not belong thereunto.

William of Malmsbury, and from him Leland and Camden, mention alſo an old nunnery here long before the removal of the biſhop's ſee hither.

STAYNING.

This ſeems to have been, in the Saxon times, a place of ſome note for a church or monaſtery, wherein St. Cudman was buried[c], and in the catalogue of Religious Houſes aſcribed to Gervaſe of Canterbury, temp. Ric. 1. mention is made of a dean and Secular canons here[d]. It is more certain, that K. Edward[e] the Confeſſor gave lands here to the abby of the Holy Trinity at Fiſcamp in Normandy, which were taken away by earl Godwin, and reſtored by K. William the Conqueror, and that thereupon ſome Benedictine monks ſent from that foreign houſe made an alien priory here, which was given to the monaſtery of Syon, 1 Ed. 4. and continued part of its poſſeſſions till the diſſolution. Speed ſaith, it was dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. Here was the pariſh of St. Cuthman[f], and the pariſh church of St. Andrew[g] in this town was appropriated to Fiſcamp. Therefore quaere as to the dedication.

DE BELLO or Battell.

On the place[h] where the famous and deciſive battle between king Harold and William duke of Normandy was fought Oct. 14. A. D. 1066. the Conqueror in the next year began to build a noble abby to the honor of St. Martin, and repleniſhed it with Benedictine[i] monks from Marmonſtier[k] in Normandy. The royal founder endowed this monaſtery with exemptions and privileges of a very extraordinary nature, and with good manors and eſtates, which were valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 880 l. 14 s. 7 d. ob. per ann. Dugd. 987 l. 0 s. 10 d. ob. q. Speed. WILMINGTON.

Robert earl of Moreton, temp. Will. Ruſi, beſtowed this manor on the abby of Greſtein in Normandy, to which it became an alien priory. The monks were of the Benedictine order. Upon the wars with France it was often ſeiſed into the king's hands, till K. Henry 4. gave licence to the dean and chapter of Chicheſter to buy this priory with the manor, etc. then valued at two hundred and forty marks per ann[a]. which they did, and had the ſame confirm'd to them by parliament, 2 Hen. 5[b]. toward the founding of a chantry of two prieſts in the ſaid cathedral. This eſtate, being ſurrendered up by the ſaid dean and chapter, was granted, 7 Eliz. to Sr. Richard Sakvile.

HASTINGS.

Within the caſtle here was a royal free chapel dedicated to the bleſſed Virgin Mary, wherein were a dean and ſeveral Secular canons[d] or prebendaries, to which Henry de Augo or Ewe, who lived temp. Hen. 1. was a benefactor[e], and it might perhaps be founded by him or his father. It was ſaid, 27 Ed. 1. that the gift of the prebends had been in the crown ever ſince the barony of Haſtings came into the king's hands, but before that, Conan Augi was patron[f]. In 26 Hen. 8. the deanry was valued at 20 l. per ann[g]. and all the ſeven[h] prebends at 41 l. 13 s. 5 d. per ann. only. The college and deanry were granted, 38 Hen. 8. to Sr. Anthony Brown.

ARUNDEL.

Roger of Montgomery, who came over with the Conqueror, and was by him made earl of Arundel and enriched with ſeventy ſeven manors in Suſſex, founded the Benedictine abby of St. Martin de Sagio, or Seez in Normandy; and 'tis very probable that he, Robert de Beleſme, or ſome other of his ſons gave [a] the church of St. Nicolas in Arundel to that foreign houſe, wherein was very early a cell of four or five Black monks, ſubject to the monaſtery at Seez, and ſo continued till the ſeiſure of theſe alien priories, during the wars with France, temp. Ed. 3. In the latter end of which reign Richard earl of Arundel obtained the king's licence to found a large chantry of ſix chaplains and ſeveral clerks and choriſters in the chapel of the caſtle here [b], and aſſigned one thouſand marks by his will toward the endowing of the ſame A. D. 1375. His ſon Richard, 3 Ric. 2. in order to fulfil his father's will, obtained of the king, with the conſent of the abbat and convent of Seez, that the priory of St. Nicolas here ſhould be extinguiſhed, and that church ſhould be made collegiate, and all the lands and tithes belonging to the monks ſhould be ſettled, with other eſtates, to the maintenance of a maſter and twelve Secular canons prieſts, with three deacons, three ſubdeacons, two acolites, ſeven choriſters, two ſacriſts and other officers. Upon this change it was ſtyled the college of the Holy Trinity, which was endowed, 26 Hen. 8. with 168 l. 0 s. 7 d. ob. clare, and 263 l. 14 s. 9 d. in toto [c]. It was ſurrendered 12 Dec. and granted the 26th of the ſame month, 36 Hen. 8. to Henry earl of Arundel the patron.

D. 872. The manor belonged to the biſhops of Worceſter from the time of biſhop Egwine (who had it for a grant of Fladbury for life) till 3 Ed. 6. But there is no farther account of any Religious houſe here till the large chantry or college was founded, 5 Ed. 3. by John de Stratford, then biſhop of Wincheſter and afterward archbiſhop of Canterbury, for a warden, four prieſts, three clerks, and four choriſters, who were to celebrate divine ſervice at the altar of St. Thomas [f] in the ſouth iſle [g] (by him then newly built) of the pariſh church of the Holy Trinity. POLLESWORTH[b].

ABOUT the beginning of the ninth century K. Egbert[c], at the inſtance of Modwenna a holy woman then newly come out of Ireland, founded a nunnery here to the honor of our Lady, over which his daughter Editha preſided as abbeſs, who being afterward canonized, this monaſtery was dedicated to her. The nuns were diſpoſſeſſed for ſome little while after the Conqueſt of all their lands, and obliged to retire to their cell of Oldbury. But Robert Marmion and Milliſent his wife, temp. R. Steph. brought them back again hither, and reſtored their churches and eſtates, which were valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 109 l. 6 s. 6 d.[d] per ann. in the whole, but at 87 l. 16 s. 3 d. only clear. This monaſtery (wherein were maintained an abbeſs and thirteen or fourteen nuns of the order of St. Benedict) was, after the diſſolution, granted to Francis Goodyere gent. 36 Hen. 8.

COVENTRE.

HERE is ſaid to have been in the Saxon times a famous convent of nuns[e] under the government of St. Oſburg, which was deſtroyed by the Danes A. D. 1016. But about the year 1043[a]. the munificent earl of Mercia Leofric, with his lady Godiva, (among many other worthy foundations) began here a noble monaſtery for an abbat and twenty four Benedictine monks, whom they endowed with twenty four manors, and richly finiſhed the church, and all the offices of the houſe, to the honor of the bleſſed Virgin Mary, St. Peter and St. Oſburgh. Upon the vacancy of this abby, A. D. 1095. Robert de Limeſy, biſhop of Cheſter, obtained not only the cuſtody of it, but alſo leave to remove his epiſcopal ſee hither, whereupon this monaſtery became a cathedral priory, and the prior and convent were one of the chapters to the biſhops of this dioceſe, many of whom ſtyled themſelves biſhops of Coventry only. One of them, viz. Hugh de Novant, in the year 1191. took ſome occaſion to expel the monks, and in their room placed Secular canons in this church; but within ſeven years the monks got to be reſtored, and continued here till the ſurrender 30 Hen. 8. About which time their revenues were valued at 731 l. 19 s. 5 d. per ann. or, after repriſes, at 499 l. 7 s. 4 d. clare. The ſite was granted, 37 Hen. 8. to John Combes and Richard Stansfield.

WARWICK, All Saints.

IF what John Rous reports be true, concerning St. Dubricius's fixing an epiſcopal ſeat here in the church of All Saints within the precincts of the caſtle about the latter end of the ſixth century, before he went to Landaff, this ought to have the firſt place in this county. It is pretty certain, that before the Conqueſt there were great privileges belonging to this church of All Saints, and therein were Secular prieſts or canons [a], who were, after the year 1125. united to the college of St. Mary in this town, the caſtle rendering their old church and habitation very inconvenient.

MONKS KIRKBY.

An alien priory of Benedictine monks to the abby of St. Nicolas at Angiers, which owed its original to the large grant of lands and tithes in this and other neighbouring towns, which Goſfred de Wirchia made, A. D. 1077. to that foreign monaſtery. This cell, as well as the head houſe, was dedicated to St. Nicolas, and after many ſeiſures, during the wars with France, leave was given by the king, 20 Ric. 2. to annex the ſame to the new erected priory of Carthuſians in Axholm near Epworth in Lincolnſhire, upon which it was finally ſettled 3 Hen. 5. after it had been reſtored to the abby of Angiers for ſome little time during the reign of king Henry 4[b]. The annual farm paid at the exchequer for this alien priory, during the time it was in the king's hands, was 40 l. but Dugdale mentions an extent taken 1 Ric. 2. of the eſtates belonging thereunto then valued at 220 l. 3 s. 4 d. per ann. After the diſſolution, the manor of Monks Kirkby with the appurtenances were granted to Charles duke of Suffolk, but the rectory and tithes in the adjacent villages were made part of the endowment of Trinity college in Cambridge by K. Henry 8. anno regni 37.

WARWICK, St. Mary's.

THE church of our Lady in this town ſeem'd to be more than parochial temp. Will. Conq. becauſe it was endowed with a hide of land in Miton at the time of making the Domeſday Book. Henry de Newburgh, the firſt earl of Warwick of the Norman line, gave ſeveral tithes and lands to it for prebends, with deſign to make it collegiate, and to unite the church of All Saints in Caſtle to it; but dying before he could compleat it, his ſon earl Roger, after the year 1123. finiſhed it, and eſtabliſhed therein a dean and Secular canons. It was encreaſed in revenues and buildings by the munificence of ſeveral earls of Warwick, among which the beautiful chapel of our Lady on the ſouth ſide of the choir, founded according to the will of Richard Beauchamp earl of Warwick, highly deſerves notice. About the time of the diſſolution here were a dean, five prebendaries or canons, ten prieſts vicars, and ſix choriſters, who had poſſeſſions to the value of 247 l. 13 s. ob. per ann. Dugd. Speed. 334 l. 2 s. 3 d. ob. according to a mſ. in the hands of Sr. Simon Archer. The ſite of this college was granted, 37 Hen. 8. to the burgeſſes of Warwick.

[a] Till the time of king Henry 2. or after, as appears from the indulgence granted to them by Robert biſhop of Hereford. But in the reign of K. Edward 1. it ſeems to have been only the chapel of St. Laurence, the oblations of which belonged to the nuns of Poleſworth, upon their paying a yearly acknowledgment to the rector of Manceter. And in the grant upon the diſſolution, it is not called, "prioratus ſive cella," but "dominium ſive manerium ac "capitale meſſuagium de Oldbury."

[b] For this perſon and his lady's giving them "ſitum "loci," and the dedication of it thereupon by Roger biſhop of Cheſter, and ſome expreſſions in their grants have the appearance of their being original donors; tho' Dugdale's Warwickſhire, p. 1082. ſaith, they only confirmed the grants of their anceſtors. WARWICK.

"In the north ſuburb is a chapel of St. Michael, where ſometime was a college having a "maiſter and confratres[e]." This was the hoſpital of St. Michael at the lower end of Saltford ſtreet, founded by Roger earl of Warwick in the latter end of the reign of K. Henry 1. or beginning of that of K. Stephen, for a maſter or warden, and ſeveral leprous brethren; whoſe revenues were valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 12 l. 5 s. 2 d. per ann. in the whole, as Sancroft's mſ. and clearly at 10 l. 1 s. 10 d. as Speed, and at 10 l. 1 s. 8 d. as Dugdale. But by another ſurvey made 37 Hen. 8. they were certified to be worth 10 l. 19 s. 10 d. over and above all repriſes. This hoſpital is ſtill kept up for eight poor women.

STONELY or Stanley in Ardern.

A Cistertian abby tranſlated hither from Radmore (in com. Staff.) by K. Henry 2. A. D. 1154 [f]. It was dedicated to the bleſſed Virgin, had about fourteen or fifteen monks [g], whoſe yearly income was rated, 26 Hen. 8. at 151 l. 0 s. 3 d. ob. per ann. Dugd. 178 l. 2 s. 5 d. ob. Speed [h]. In 30 Hen. 8. Charles Brandon duke of Suffolk obtained a grant of this monaſtery to him and his heirs.

[a] In K. Stephen's reign, as Dugdale's Warwickſhire, p. 1066. But in the reign of King Henry 2. as the Monaſt. tom. i. p. 518. For the founder in his charter there ſaith, "Hanc donationem feci aſſenſu et conceſſione R. Henrici "ſecundi:" Yet early in his reign, for Walter biſhop of Coventry and Maurice biſhop of Bangor, who are witneſſes to Robert the ſon's confirmation of his father's gift, died both of them A. D. 1161. as Godwin De praeſul. p. 367 et 644.

[b] It is frequently called an abby, in the charters of the founder, his ſon, and of K. Henry 2. Mon. Angl. tom. i. p. 518, 519.

[c] [c] "Prioratus de Non Eton Litch. et Cov. dioc. per "priorem et prioriſſam ſolitus gubernari A. D. 1400." Rymer, vol. 8. p. 161. So the grant of the church of St. Gregory's in Sudbury to Symon biſhop of London, etc. 48 Ed. 3. runs in the name of Margaret prioreſs and William prior and convent of Nun Eton. And the licence of mortmain, 49 Ed. 3. is "prioriſſae, priori, et conventui "de Non Eaton." But this ſeems to have been altered before the diſſolution, when there were a prioreſs and nuns only. See the ſurrender in Rymer, vol. xiv. p. 665. See alſo Dugdale's Warwickſhire, p. 1067. and Willis's Hiſt. of Abbies, vol. ii. p. 245. where the prioreſs and twenty four nuns of this houſe are ſaid to have been then penſioned.

COVENTRY Charterhouſe.

WILLIAM lord Zouch, A. D. 1381. intended to build a monaſtery of the Carthuſian order, to the honor of St. Anne, upon fourteen acres of land in Shortley near Coventry, which he had obtained for that purpoſe of Sr. Baldwin Frevile, but being prevented by death, his good deſign was carried on in ſome degree by other well diſpoſed perſons, though not like to be brought to any perfection till A. D. 1385. when K. Richard 2. laid the firſt ſtone of the church, and at the requeſt of his queen Anne undertook to be founder, and accordingly endowed them with many alien priories, part of which were reaſſumed in ſucceeding reigns; ſo that this houſe, conſiſting of a prior and eight[a] monks in 26 Hen. 8. had but 131 l. 6 s. 4 d. per ann. Dugd. 161 l. 6 s. 4 d. mſ. COVENTRE, Bond's Almſhouſes or Bablake Hoſpital.

Within or near the college of Bablake, Thomas Bond draper, ſometime mayor of this city, founded an hoſpital, A. D. 1506. for a prieſt, being a preacher, ten poor men, and one woman, and endowed the ſame with lands to the yearly value of 49 l. 11 s. 7 d. It was granted, 2 Ed. 6. to the bailiffs and commonalty of the city, and is not only ſtill continued, but, as the rents have been raiſed, more poor people have been taken into it. So that now here are eighteen old men and a nurſe, receiving every one three ſhillings per week for diet, a black gown yearly, fuel, and other advantages.

COVENTRE, Gray Friers Hoſpital.

Near unto the houſe of Gray friers, William Ford a merchant in this city founded an almſhouſe A. D. 1529. for five poor men and one woman; which was ſhortly after better endowed by the charity of William Piſford his executor, and ſince, by the benefaction of Mr. Simon Norton alderman of Coventre. It is yet in being, and, by the kindneſs of the corporation, and raiſing the rents, there are now maintained in it ſeven poor men and their wives in blue gowns, who have every one 2 s. per week, and a nurſe, who hath 2 s. 6 d. per week; and to each houſe there is 10 s. worth of coals ſent every year.

WILTSHIRE.

AMBROSEBURY or Ameſbury, olim Ambroſia[a] ſive Ambrii[b] Coenobium.

HERE is ſaid to have been an ancient Britiſh monaſtery for three hundred[c] monks, founded, as ſome ſay, by Ambrius[c] an abbat[d], as others, by the famous prince Ambroſius (who was therein buried[d]) and deſtroyed by that cruel Pagan Gurmundus[e], who over-ran all this country in the ſixth century. It has been thought that here was one of the two monaſteries which were given to the learned Aſſerius by K. Alfred[f]. But it is more certain that about the year 980. Alfrida or Ethelfrida the queen dowager of K. Edgar erected here a monaſtery for nuns, and commended it to the patronage of St. Mary and St. Melorius, a Corniſh ſaint, whoſe relicks were preſerved here. It was of the Benedictine[g] order, but, A. D. 1177. the abbeſs and about thirty nuns were expelled for their ill lives, and then K. Henry 2. placed herein a prioreſs and twenty four nuns, from Font Ebrald in Normandy, to which monaſtery this houſe was for ſome time ſubject, but at length was made denizon, and became again an abby[h], endowed, 26 Hen. 8. with 495 l. 15 s. 2 d. per ann. Dugd. 558 l. 10 s. 2 d. Speed. This nunnery was ſurrendered, Dec. 1540. or 32 Hen. 8. by the abbeſs and thirty four nuns[i], and granted in April following to Edward earl of Hertford.

MALMESBURY, olim Caer Bladon [a], Ingelborn [b], Maildulphi urbs [c], ſive Curia [d], Aldhelmeſbirig [e], Maldmeſburgh [f], Meldunum [f], et Meldunеſburgh [f].

Here is ſaid to have been an ancient houſe of Britiſh nuns, under the direction of the famous Dinoth abbat of Banchor, who flouriſhed A. D. 603. which was ſuppreſſed by St. Auſtin the archbiſhop, under pretence that the Religious had ſuffered themſelves to be debauched by the ſoldiers of the neighbouring caſtle [g]. This nunnery was ſituate near the ſouth bridge without the town, in the way to Chippenham, where was in after times a poor hoſpital for lepers [h]. About thirty or forty years [i] after this Maidulf a Scotch monk ſettled here, and gathering together a company firſt of ſcholars and then of perſons diſpoſed to live under regular diſcipline, began a monaſtery, which in after times became very famous. It was better eſtabliſhed and augmented by Aldhelm, who had been educated here under Maidulf and after his maſter's death was appointed, A. D. 675. to be abbat by Eleutherius biſhop of the Weſt Saxons [k], and afterward continued in a flouriſhing condition by the bounty of the Saxon kings [l] and noblemen. About the year 950. K. Eadwy removed the monks, and placed Secular clerks [m] in this abby, but they were, in little more than twenty years time, ſent away by K. Edgar, and the Regulars [m] reſtored. Upon the death of abbat Brictwald, in the reign of K. Edward the Confeſſor, Herman [n] biſhop of Wiltſhire had once obtained the king's conſent to remove the epiſcopal ſeat from Ramſbury to this abby, but it was ſoon revoked by the intereſt of the monks with earl Godwin. Maildulf's firſt church here was dedicated to our bleſſed Savior, St. Peter and St. Paul [o], but in K. Edgar's and after times the bleſſed Virgin and St. Aldhelm [n] were the patron ſaints of this abby, which was found to be endowed, 26 Hen. 8. with 803 l. 17 s. 7 d. per ann. The ſite was granted, 36 Hen. 8. to William Stumpe a rich clothier.

BRADANFORD[a] or Bradford.

HERE was an ancient monaſtery, dedicated to St. Laurence[b], founded[c] by St. Aldhelm, who was abbat here at the time of his being made biſhop, viz. A. D. 705[a]. King Ethelred gave it to the great nunnery of Shafteſbury[c] A. D. 1001. And after that time I meet with no account of any Religious ſociety here.

WILTON, olim Ellandune.

THIS monaſtery owes its original to Weoxſtan or Wulſtan the famous earl or duke of Wiltſhire, who about the year 773[d]. repaired an old church of St. Mary here (which had been almoſt quite demoliſhed by the Danes) and placed therein a college or chantry of Secular prieſts; but after his death A. D. 800. his relict S. Alburga ſiſter to K. Egbert got leave of her brother to make it a nunnery for twelve Religious virgins beſides the prioreſs. This king encouraged this project, and is thereupon ſaid to be the firſt founder of this monaſtery[e]. King Aelfred (having routed the Danes not far from this town A. D. 871.) on the perſuaſion of his wife Egwine built a new nunnery on the ſite of the royal palace here for an abbeſs and twelve Religious, and cauſed the nuns from St. Mary's to come to this new houſe, which conſiſted of twenty ſix nuns, and was dedicated to St. Mary and St. Bartholomew. K. Edward ſen[f]. and king Edgar were great benefactors to this monaſtery, the latter for the ſake of his natural daughter St. Edith[g] a nun, and, as ſome ſay, abbeſs[h] here, who was afterwards canonized, and became the patron ſaint[i] of this abby, which was of the Benedictine order, and had yearly revenues about the time of the diſſolution[k] valued at 601 l. 1 s. 1 d. q. as Dugd. and 652 l. 11 s. 5 d. q. as Speed. It was granted, 35 Hen. 8. to Sr. William Herbert.

TISSELBURY or Tiſbury [a].

WINTRA abbat of Tiſſelbury in the kingdom of the Weſt Saxons, is mention'd as floriſhing about the year 720. in the life of St. Boniface [b]. King Ethelred gave to the abby of Shafteſbury " xx. manſas illo in loco, qui noto Æt Tiſſebiri vocatus vocamine ſitas [c]."

RAMSBURY.

To the five new biſhoprics, erected in the kingdom of the Weſt Saxons A. D. 905. (or, as Mr. Wharton rather thinks, A. D. 909.) there was added within a few years [d] after a ſixth [e], viz. that of Wiltſhire, whoſe biſhops had their ſeat here at Rameſbury [f], but here being no chapter of clerks, nor any thing to maintain the ſame, biſhop Herman, A. D. 1055. attempted to remove to Malmeſbury [g] abby, and to make that his cathedral, but was not able to effect it. About A. D. 1060 [h]. this dioceſe was reunited to Shirburn, which the ſame biſhop, ſoon after the year 1072 [i]. got tranſlated to

OLD SALISBURY.

WHERE near, or rather within the caſtle [k], he began a cathedral church, which was finiſhed, endowed, and conſecrated to the honor of the bleſſed Virgin Mary A. D. 1092 [l]. by his ſucceſfor biſhop Oſmund[a]. Here, upon this dry hill and otherwiſe inconvenient place, the epiſcopal ſeat continued, till biſhop Richard Poor, in the beginning[b] of the reign of king Henry 3. laid the foundation of a cathedral about a mile to the ſouth eaſt of the old one, in a place called Meryfield, a low ſituation at the confluence of the Avon and Nadder. This new church was almoſt forty years in building, and was dedicated on the feaſt of St. Michael A. D. 1258[c]. to the Virgin Mary, and is the ſtately fabric yet in being, one of the nobleſt monuments of the magnificent piety and architecture of the former ages. Hereupon the biſhop, dignitaries and members of the church deſerted Old Sarum, and with their officers and dependents built houſes near the new church, to which the city of New Sarum owes its original. The revenues of the biſhopric were valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 1507 l. 14 s. 6 d. in the whole, and at 1367 l. 11 s. 6 d. clear. And the common revenues of the chapter were then valued at 721 l. 18 s. 1 d. in the whole, and at 601 l. 12 s. 0 d[d]. clear. There are now belonging to this cathedral a biſhop, dean, precentor, chancellor, three (formerly four) archdeacons, a ſubdean, ſubchantor, forty five prebendaries, ſix vicars or petty canons, ſix ſinging men, eight choriſters, an organiſt, etc.

[a] Quaere. But the tradition, that here anciently was a Religious houſe (mſ. epiſt. Will. Aubrey) join'd with the deſcription of its being in the Weſt Saxon dominions, ſeems to make it probable that this was the place.

[f] And no where elſe, as I conceive. They are generally indeed ſtyled Epiſcopi Wiltunenſes, which, according to Leland, ſhould be tranſlated, Biſhops of Wiltſhire, not of Wilton; for, " Epiſcopus Wiltonienſis, non a Wiladuno " oppido, ſed provincia ſic dictus." Collect. vol. ii. p. 251. And I cannot account for ever placing them at Sunning near Reading, becauſe William of Malmſbury expreſly ſaith, that after the diviſion Berkſhire ſtill remained under the juriſdiction of the biſhop of Shirburn. N. B. That the Wiltonienſes Epiſcopi in Bromton, Decem ſcript. 838, 839. ſhould be Wintonienſes Epiſcopi.

[g] So Will. of Malmſbury, Sim. Dunelm. etc. But Matthew Weſtminſter, in anno 1015. ſaith, that Herman then endeavoured to remove the ſee to Saliſbury.

[h] Not 1050. as in Le Neve; for it was not 'till after Herman's return from S. Bertin's, which was A. D. 1058.

[i] He is called biſhop of Sareſbury A. D. 1070. in Sim. Dunelm. col. 202. but he writes himſelf biſhop of Shireburn in 1072. as Ingulf. edit. Oxon. p. 92, 93. Bromton ſaith, he removed from Shirburn to Sarum 9 Will. Conq.

[k] In the weſt part of the town, as Leland. Itin. vol. iii. p. 62. " Caſtro comitis vicina," Mat. Paris in anno 1257. But Malmſbury, Wikes, etc. make the cathedral to have been built within the caſtle; and it ſeems likewiſe to have been ſo, from the hiſtory and chapter acts of Sarum in archdeacon Wilkins's Councils, vol. i. p. 552. That the biſhop's and canons houſes were within the caſtle ſee below pat. 5 Ed 3. p. 1. m. 2.

UPHAVEN.

The church of this place being given to the ancient and rich abby of St. Wandragaſile at Fontanelle in the dioceſe of Roan, as early probably as the time of K. Henry 1. or that of K. Stephen[a], there was a cell [b] of Benedictine monks from thence placed here. Upon the diſſolution of the alien priories this was given, 1 Hen. 6. to the monaſtery of Ivychurch in exchange for ſome lands and privileges in Clarindon park, and, as parcel of the poſſeſſions of that monaſtery, was granted, 4 Jac. 1. to Francis and William Anderſon. So that the grants of this alien priory, 37 Hen. 6. to King's college Cambridge, and 7 Ed. 4. to Windſor college [c], were of no effect.

KINGSWOOD[d].

In performance of a deſign of Roger de Berkele ſen. which by reaſon of his death could not be accompliſhed, an abby of Ciſtertian monks from Tynterne was built here A. D. 1139 [e]. by his nephew William de Berkeley, to the honor of the bleſſed Virgin Mary: But the abbat and moſt of the monks were, in the latter part of the reign of K. Stephen, or in the beginning of that of K. Henry 2. by agreement with Reginald de S. Walery, removed to Haſelden in the pariſh of Rodmarton, and from thence, for want of water, in a little time they went to Tettebury, to which place Kingſwood became a grange or cell, with only a monk or two to ſay maſs. After ſome attempts made by the abbat of Waverle to place ſome of his monks at Kingſwood, and other diſputes, all were compromiſed by the concurrence of Roger de Berkeley and Bernard of S. Walery; and the abby was once more removed from Tettebury to a place called Mireford in Kingſwood, not far from the old ſite, about the year 1170. It was rated, 26 Hen. 8. at 244 l. 11 s. 2 d. per ann. Dugd. 254 l. 11 s. 2 d[f]. Speed. 239 l. 19 s. 7 d. ob. q. clare. 254 l. 5 s. 10 d. ſumma totalis, mſ. OKEBURN.

ABOUT the year 1149[c]. Maud de Walingford (daughter and heireſs to Robert D'oiley) gave to the abby of Bec Herlowyn in Normandy the manors and churches of Great and Little Okeburn, at the former of which places a convent of Benedictine monks from that foreign monaſtery was not long after fixed, and became the chiefeſt and richeſt cell in England to it. It underwent the ſame fate with the other alien priories of being often ſeiſed, during the wars with France, into the king's hands, and finally ſuppreſſed 2 Hen. 5. All the tithes, and other ſpiritualties of this Religious houſe were given by John duke of Bedford to Windſor college, and confirmed to them by K. Henry 5. and K. Edward 4. but the priory and manors of Okeburn Magna and Parva were granted by K. Henry 6. firſt to the univerſity of Cambridge, and afterward to the provoſt and fellows of King's college in that univerſity. And 1 Ed. 4. this priory, or ſome part of its lands, was granted to the Charterhouſe in London.

MAYDEN BRADELEY.

In the latter end of the reign of K. Stephen, or the beginning of that of K. Henry 2. Manaſſer Biſet [a] founded here an hoſpital for poor leprous women, under the care of ſome Secular brethren or prieſts, who were to provide neceſſaries and manage their eſtates for them. But Hubert [b] biſhop of Saliſbury, about the year 1190. changed thoſe Seculars into a prior and canons of the order of St. Auſtin. It was dedicated to the bleſſed Virgin Mary, and, about the time of the diſſolution, conſiſted of eight canons and . . . . poor ſiſters, who had yearly revenues amounting to 180 l. 10 s. 4 d. Dugd. 197 l [c]. 18 s. 8 d. Speed. [a] He was ſewer to king Henry 2. before he was king (Dugd. Baron. vol. i. p. 39.) as well as after. Leland, Itin. vol. iv. p. 81. ſaith, that "this hoſpital was builded to the "priory of chanons by one of the three heirs general of the "Biſets, who being a lazar gave her part of the town of "Kidderminſter in pios uſus." This probably was the traditionary report at Kidderminſter in Leland's time, but the eſtate of the Biſets did not come into females till many years after this Religious houſe was built, which was originally an hoſpital for leprous women; and their relief and maintenance ſeems to be the principal view of the foundation; the prieſts firſt, and afterward the Regular canons were added to be ſubſervient to them, (being called "pro-"curatores mulierum," Leland. Collect. vol. i. p. 84. Madox's Formul. p. 23.) tho' in proceſs of time the prior and convent ſeem to have got the whole government of the houſe and its revenues, (Madox's Formul. p. 314, 362.) and to have dropped the ſiſters, who are firſt named in the old deeds. Manaſſer Biſet gave theſe leprous women the manor of Bradley, "pro Alicia uxore ſua, de cujus haere-"ditate manerium illud eſt." So that his wife was an heireſs, and probably the leper hinted at by Leland. Camden ſeems to be miſtaken in making the daughter of Manaſſer Biſet the leper and foundreſs of the hoſpital, and this to be diſtinct from the priory founded by her father.

King William the Conqueror gave this church [e] to the abby of St. Stephen at Caen in Normandy, and, as parcel of the late poſſeſſions of that foreign houſe, K. Henry 6. gave it to King's college in Cambridge. But at preſent I am at a loſs to reconcile this with the grant of the church and ſome other things in this town made by K. Henry 2. to the Benedictine monks "De majori monaſterio", or of Marmonſtier in Tourein, who had here a cell. This alien priory, which ſeems, during the wars with France, to have been in the cuſtody of the biſhop

Henry 2. or before. It was by K. Henry 6. granted to Eaton college, and confirmed by K. Edward 4. but was ſhortly after reſigned to the crown in exchange for Blaxham, etc. and thereupon granted, 1 Ed. 4. to Edward duke of Somerſet.

CHARLETON near Uphaven.

Here was an alien priory cell to the Premonſtratenſian abby De Inſula Dei or L'iſle Dieu [a], which was founded by Reginald de Pavely A. D. 1187 [b]. and he having great poſſeſſions in this county [c], might probably give lands here toward the better ſupport of his new foundation. Upon the ſeiſing and ſuppreſſing theſe foreign houſes, this of Charleton was, temp. Ric. 2. given to the hoſpital of St. Katherine near the Tower, London. It was farm'd at 22 l. per ann. temp. Hen. 6. and given by that king for ſeven years to the college of Eton. K. Edward 4. made a donation of it to the dean and canons of Windſor, but they never enjoy'd it by reaſon of a prior grant to Fodringhey collegiate church, as parcel of whoſe poſſeſſions it was granted to Sr. William Sharington 2 Ed. 6.

WILTON, Hoſpital of St. John.

Near or without the gate of this town was an hoſpital of a maſter or prior and poor brethren, dedicated to St. John, as early as A. D. 1217[b]. About the time of the diſſolution there were but four poor perſons in it, and the revenues of it with the chapels of Burcomb were valued at 16 l. 18 s. 4 d. per ann[c]. in the whole, and 14 l. 13 s. 10 d. ob. clear[d]. SALISBURY, Hoſpital of St. Nicholas or Harnham Hoſpital.

The hoſpital of St. Nicholas between the cloſe and Harnham bridge is ſaid to have been founded by biſhop Poore[f] about A. D. 1220. But it was probably begun only by him, and chiefly carried on and endowed by his ſucceſſor biſhop Bingham[g], about A. D. 1245. for a maſter (ſometimes called the prior) eight poor men, and four poor women[h], who were endowed 26 Hen. 8. with 64 l. 16 s. 5 d. ob. per ann[i]. in the whole, and 25 l. 2 s. 2 d. clear[k]. It was reſtored by K. James 1[l]. Apr. 3. 1610. and is ſtill kept up for a maſter (in holy orders nominated by the biſhop) ſix poor men, and ſix poor women, who have a comfortable ſubſiſtence; and are eleven of them put in by the maſter, and one by the dean and chapter.

Upon the quarrel with Otho the pope's legate at Oxford, A. D. 1238. and the interdict to that univerſity thereupon, many of the ſcholars withdrew from thence, and ſettled here in this city[f]; which became for ſome time a ſort of univerſity: But there is no account of any particular houſes of learning here built, till about A. D. 1260. when "Egidius de Bridport biſhop "of Sareſbyri made the college de Vaulx (in or de Valle) for ſcholers, between the palace "walle and Harnam bridge; part of theſe ſcholers remaine yn the college at Sareſbyri, and "have two chaplains to ſerve, the chirch there being dedicate to St. Nicolas, the reſidew ſtudie "at Oxford: The ſcholars of Vaulx be bounde to celebrate the anniverſarye of Giles their "founder at the paroch chirch of Britport in Dorſetſhire where he was born[g]." The chancellor of the cathedral church is ſaid to have his lodgings in this college, and to read lectures in divinity three times in every week to the ſcholars, who kept their public diſputations in the old library of the cathedral[h]. It continued 'till the general ſuppreſſion, about which time this college conſiſted of a warden, four fellows, and two chaplains[i]; the ſite and many of its poſſeſſions were granted, 35 Hen. 8. to Sr. Michael Liſter.

SALISBURY, Vicars and Choriſters of the Cathedral.

THE vicars of this church were incorporated into a collegiate ſociety 11 Hen. 4. had a body of ſtatutes, a pretty college[f], a common hall where they ate together, and yearly revenues valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 248 l. 11 s. 10 d. ob. per ann. but charged with yearly outgoing rents amounting to 12 l. 0 s. 4 d[g]. They are ſtill a body corporate, have a common ſeal, and ſeveral eſtates belonging to them; but, as the marriage of the clergy got ground, the collegiate way of living in this and all ſuch like ſocieties grew into diſuſe. There are now belonging to this corporation ſix prieſt vicars, ſix lay clerks, and the organiſt.

WORCESTERSHIRE.

WORCESTER, Wigornia or Wigornceaſter[a].

UPON the diviſion of the over great biſhopric of the whole kingdom of Mercia, an epiſcopal ſee with a chapter of Secular clerks was placed here by K. Ethelred and archbiſhop Theodore about the year of our Lord 680[b]. in a church dedicated to St. Peter, which came in the next century to be more generally called St. Mary's[c]. Upon the pretended reformation of theſe eccleſiaſtical ſocieties, by the expulſion of the Seculars, in the time, and by the command of K. Eadgar, biſhop Oſwald, before A. D. 964[d]. founded a new cathedral in the old churchyard[e], to the honor of the bleſſed Virgin, and placed therein a prior and monks. Soon after the Conqueſt this convent, from the number of twelve, encreaſed to fifty Religious of the Benedictine order, by the zeal and munificence of good biſhop Wolſtan, who built for them a new and larger monaſtery A. D. 1088[f]. Thus it continued till the general ſuppreſſion, when its poſſeſſions amounted to 1386 l. 12 s. 10 d. ob. q. per ann. according to Mr. Speed, or 1290 l. 10 s. 6 d. ob. q[g]. clare, moſt of which were regranted by K. PERSHORE, olim Perſcora.

Oswald, one of the nephews of Ethelred king of Mercia, is ſaid to have been the founder of a Religious houſe here A. D. 689[a]. which conſiſted at firſt of Secular clerks, then monks, then Seculars again[b] or nuns[c], who were diſmiſs'd by king Eadgar and biſhop Oſwald A. D. 984. from which time it became an abby of Benedictine monks, dedicated at firſt to the Bleſſed Virgin and the apoſtles St. Peter and St. Paul[d], but afterward to St. Eadburgh[e]. The yearly revenues of it were 643 l. 4 s. 5 d. Dugd. 666 l. 13 s. 0 d. Speed[f]. The ſite was granted, 36 Hen. 8. to William and Francis Sheldon.

WITHINGTON[a], olim Wudiandun.

Oshere[b] viceroy, lord lieutenant, or earl of Worceſterſhire, with the conſent of K. Ethelred, about the end of the ſeventh century, gave a parcel of land here to two nuns, in order to found a monaſtery[c], which ſeems to have continued here under three or four abbeſſes till A. D. 774[d]. and after, but the eſtate at length came into the church of Worceſter, and was part of the endowment of the biſhopric.

STOURBRIDGE[a].

KING Aethilbalt, A. D. 736. gave to the earl Cyneberht lands upon the river Stour to build a monaſtery, which ſeems to have come afterward to the church of Worceſter.

BREDON[b].

ETHELBALD king of Mercia, before the year 716[c]. gave this town to his kinſman Eanulf (who was grandfather to king Offa) with intent that he ſhould found a monaſtery here, which he ſeems to have done and dedicated it to St. Peter. It ſubſiſted under an abbat[d] of its own till after the year 841. But before the Conqueſt[e] it became part of the poſſeſſions of the biſhopric of Worceſter.

CLIVE or Wendleſclive[g].

HERE was an ancient monaſtery dedicated to St. Michael the archangel in the time of K. Offa about A. D. 790. which ſeems to have been annexed to the biſhop or church of Worceſter before A. D. 888.

KEMESEY.

HERE was another monaſtery as old as A. D. 799. which then flouriſhed under its abbat Balthune, but within leſs than half a century after was united to the church of Worceſter[h].

---

[a] This is as likely to be the place of this monaſtery as any, but it is uncertain, the charter mentioning only a parcel of land upon the Stour; and from Heathered's deed it appears that Sture and Sture in Uſmerum were two different places belonging to Worceſter; the laſt ſeems moſt likely to have been the place of the monaſtery. Tho' I have ſometimes thought it might poſſibly have been at Shipſton, formerly called Scepeweſton and Scepwaſce; for this belongs to the church of Worceſter, and is ſaid to be in "ripa Sture "fluminis," and "juxta fluvium qui dicitur Sture," in Hemingus, p. 520. 325.

[b] Different from the old monaſtery of this name near Peterburgh, of which ſee the Petriburgh hiſtorians.

THIS monaſtery was in being in biſhop Milred's[c] time, about A. D. 770. and was, with the lands thereunto belonging, given to the church of Worceſter, either by duke Aelfred[d] about the year 800. or by king Coenwulf A. D. 814[e].

THE charter of king Burhred, dated A. D. 855. mentions a monaſtery then here, which was given afterward to the biſhopric of Worceſter.

MALVERN MAJOR.

HERE, in the great wild foreſt, was an hermitage or ſome kind of Religious houſe for Seculars before the Conqueſt, with ſome endowment by the gift of K. Edward the Confeſſor[f]. About the year 1083. Aldewine[g] the chief of this place was perſuaded by St. Wolſtan biſhop of Worceſter to turn Benedictine monk; upon which he immediately ſet about procuring benefactions for the building and maintaining a priory of that order. Giſlebert abbat of Weſtminſter, with the conſent of his convent, aſſigned ſeveral manors and eſtates to that purpoſe at an yearly rent[h], whereupon this monaſtery was looked upon as a cell[i] or at leaſt ſubordinate[k] to Weſtminſter abby. But that it was founded by Urſo de Abetot before the Conqueſt, as the learned and curious author of the Antiquities of this place aſſerts upon the authority of the plea roll in Monaſt. vol. ii. p. 876. may be juſtly doubted; firſt, becauſe of the entire ſilence of both charters of K. Henry 1. in which the precedent benefactions are particularly recited; ſecondly, the name ſeems very unlike a Saxon name, and moſt probably this Urſo was a Norman, and came over with K. William the Conqueror, who made him ſheriff of Worceſterſhire, and gave him ſeveral eſtates which belonged to the Saxons before the Conqueſt.

[a] Annales Wigorn. in anno. But perhaps this houſe might be as early as the Conqueſt; for Will. of Malmſbury, ſpeaking of St. Wulſtan's parents, in Angl. Sacr. vol. ii. p. 245. ſaith, " Pater apud Wigorniam monachi habitum, ma- " ter in eadem urbe ſanctimonialis ſuſcepit velum." Now we meet with no nunnery here but this.

[b] Leland. Itin. vol. iv. p. 85.

[c] Dugd. Baron. vol. i. p. 227. and in all probability ſtill earlier; for in the year 1266. there was a general chapter of the Friers Minors at Worceſter, which it is not likely that they would hold any where but in an houſe of their own order.

[d] Among the caſtles in Wiceſterſhire, Leland (Itin. vol. ii. p. 11.) reckons " Helmelege, where the college is"; and Dugdale, ſpeaking of the caſtle, (Baron. vol. i. p. 238.) adds, " called alſo the college;" and to the ſame purpoſe in the record 12 Ed. 4.

Mr. Wharton both in his Anglia Sacra, and De epiſcopis Wigorn. makes biſhop John Low to have been an " Auſtin frier at Worceſter," but as I do not meet with a convent of that order there, I ſuppoſe it may be meant of this houſe at Wich.

YORK Cathedral.

The account given us of an archbiſhop's ſee being founded here by K. Lucius, and of the three or four archbiſhops in the Britiſh times, ſeems to be fabulous. It is more certain that the metropolitical church of St. Peter in this city owes its original to Edwyn king of the Northumbers, who, upon his converſion to Chriſtianity A. D. 627. fixed Paulinus archbiſhop in a little church built by him firſt of wood, and afterward begun by him of ſtone [b], which was carried on by K. Oſwald, and finiſhed by archbiſhop Wilfrid [c]. This church was burnt down firſt A. D. 741 [d]. and being afterwards rebuilt, had the ſame fate A. D. 1069 [e]. Thomas the firſt Norman archbiſhop conſtituted the ſeveral dignities and prebends [f], and made it a regular chapter, began to repair the cathedral, which was again deſtroy'd by fire A. D. 1137. but by the munificence and care of archbiſhops Roger, John Romane, Melton, Thoreſby, and other benefactors, the ſtately fabrick now ſtanding was erected. To this cathedral belong now the archbiſhop, dean, precentor, chancellor, ſubdean [g], four archdeacons, viz. of York, Eaſt Riding, Cleveland, and Nottingham, twenty eight prebendaries [h], a ſub-chantor, five prieſt vicars, ſeven lay clerks, ſix choriſters, four vergers, with other officers and ſervants. The revenues of the archbiſhopric were valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 2035 l. 3 s. 7 d. thoſe of the community or canons reſidentiary at 439 l. 2 s. 6 d. of the dean at 308 l. 10 s. 7 d. Thoſe of the other members of this church may be ſeen in Ecton's Valor.

LASTINGHAM[a], olim Laeſtingeau[b], Laſtingaen[c], Leſtingey[d], Leſtingaham[e], in the deanry of Rydale and archdeaconry of Cleveland.

Odilbald or Edilbald king of part of the Northumbers, gave to Cedd biſhop of the Eaſt Angles this place in order to found a monaſtery after the rites of that at Lindisfarn[f] A. D. 648[g]. It is ſaid to have been dedicated to the bleſſed Virgin Mary; and being deſtroyed in the Daniſh wars, abbat Stephen, temp. R. Will. Conq. began to repair it, and to repleniſh it with Religious[h], but he and they were ſoon after invited to ſettle at a better place, viz. at St. Mary's in York.

WHITBY, olim Streaneſchalch, Sinus Phari[p], Preſteby[q], in the deanry and archdeaconry of Cleveland.

King Oſwy[r] having given this place to St. Hilda, ſhe founded here, about A. D. 657. a monaſtery for men and women[s], under the government of an abbeſs, dedicated to St. Peter; in which were educated ſeveral biſhops and others of great note for learning and holineſs[t]. But this Religious ſociety being diſperſed by Inguar and Hubba[v], during the Daniſh incurſions, the buildings lay in ruins till they were re-edified and filled with Benedictine monks by William de Percy pretty ſoon after the Conqueſt. In the time of K. Henry 1. it became an abby, was dedicated to St. Peter and St. Hilda, and, 26 Hen. 8. had yearly revenues to the value of 437 l. 2 s. 9 d. Dugd. 505 l. 9 s. 1 d. Speed. The ſite was granted, 4 Ed. 6. to John earl of Warwick.

RIPPON, olim Inrhypum[f], Hripenſis Eccleſia[g], or Ad Ripan[h].

Alchfrid king of the Northumbers gave this place firſt to abbat Eata to build a monaſtery; but before that could be finiſhed he was ſent away, and St. Wilfrid made abbat here before A. D. 661. This Religious houſe was endowed with great privileges by K. Ethelſtan, and continued in great repute till it was burnt down in the devaſtation which K. Edred made in theſe parts about A. D. 950[i]. Archbiſhop Oſwald[k] and his ſucceſſors, archbiſhops of York, aſſiſted in the rebuilding of the church, and archbiſhop Aldred[l], about the time of the Conqueſt, endowed it with lands, and made it collegiate, as it continues to this day. It was firſt[m] dedicated to St. Peter, but in ſome later writings it is called the church of St. Wilfrid. Herein were ſeven prebends, viz. Thorp[n] valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 20 l. per ann. clare. Stanwyge 40 l. Skelton and Yevenhale 15 l. 10 s. 4 d. Monketon 24 l. 12 s. 8 d. Sharrow 14 l. 5 s. 2 d. Stodley 26 l. 11 s. 4 d. Anwyke 221 l. and ſix vicars choral each worth 6 l. The revenues of the community were valued at 35 l. 3 s. 8 d. and the fabric lands at 12 l. 12 s. 7 d. Upon the diſſolution the eſtates of this church came to the crown, and were granted into lay lands, and ſo continued all queen Elizabeth's time. But K. James 1. at the requeſt of his queen Anne, refounded the ſame, adding a dean to the ſeven prebendaries, and endowed it with 247 l. per ann[o].

HACKNESS, olim Hacanos, in Whitbyſtrand three miles from Scarborough[a].

Here St. Hilda built a monaſtery a little before her death A. D. 680[b]. which probably by the wars and devaſtations of this country was demoliſhed long before the Conqueſt. In the time of king William Rufus the pirates having ſack'd Whitby, and driven away the monks from thence, William de Percy gave them this place, where they continued ſome time, and then return'd to Whitby, but left ſome of their number here in the church of St. Peter[c] as a cell ſubordinate to their abby.

JOHN archbiſhop of York (afterward called St. John of Beverley) is ſaid to have founded[c] about the year 700[d]. in the choir of the pariſh church here a convent of monks dedicated to St. John Baptiſt; in the nave of the church, a college of ſeven Secular canons with ſeven clerks, to the honor of St. John the Evangeliſt; and in the chapel of St. Martin, adjoining to this church, a ſociety of Religious virgins or nuns. But about one hundred and ſixty years[e] after, the Religious here were murdered, and the church and buildings plundered and burnt to the ground by the Danes. Not long after ſome of the Seculars, who had fled from and eſcaped the Daniſh fury, began to ſettle here again and to repair the church, which was completed and endowed with revenues for ſeven canons, and with large privileges (to the honor of St. John of Beverley) by king Aethelſtan, and the favor and bounty of ſucceeding kings, and of the archbiſhops of York, who claimed the immediate patronage. This collegiate ſociety floriſhed to that degree that it conſiſted at the diſſolution of a provoſt, eight prebendaries, a chancellor, precentor, ſeven rectors[f] choral, nine vicars choral, with many chantry prieſts, clerks, choriſters, officers and ſervants. The provoſtſhip was rated, 26 Hen. 8. at 109 l. 8 s. 8 d. ob. per ann. clare. The prebend of St. Michael at 31 l. 13 s. 4 d. Of St. Peter at 46 l. 6 s. 11 d. ob. Of St. Martin at 39 l. 11 s. 1 d. Of St. Katharine at 10 l. 18 s. 4 d. Of St. Mary at 35 l. 17 s. 0 d. Of St. Stephen at 44 l. Of St. Andrew at 48 l. 16 s. 1 d. Of St. James at 47 l. 1 s. 4 d. The chancellorſhip at 13 l. 16 s. 0 d. The precentorſhip at 13 l. 9 s. 4 d. The fabric lands at 18 l. 3 s. 8 d. The rectors choral had lands in common to the yearly value of 8 l. 13 s. 7 d. beſides a penſion of 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. to every one of them. YORK, St. Mary's.

In the time of William [a] the Conqueror Alan earl of Richmond gave the church of St. Olave near the city, with four acres to build offices on, to abbat Stephen and his convent of Benedictine monks, who had been driven away from Whitby and Leſtingay. But that church being too ſmall, K. William Rufus, about A. D. 1088. gave ground for building of a bigger, laid the foundation ſtone with his own hand, to the honor of the bleſſed Virgin Mary, and endowed the monaſtery with large poſſeſſions [b]. Its revenues, by theſe and other benefactions, were increaſed at the time of the diſſolution, when here were fifty monks, to the value of 2085 l. 1 s. 5 d. ob. q. per ann. Speed, and 1550 l. 7 s. 0 d. q. Dugd. But in the original roll of the Valor, 26 Hen. 8. their total yearly income was rated at 2091 l. 4 s. 7 d. q. and clearly at 1650 l. 0 s. 7 d. q [c].

[a] I cannot account for the monks of St. Mary's without York, mentioned by Ingulf, p. 76. under the year 1076. it no where elſe appearing that there were then any Religious of that denomination in this city. Thoſe alſo are miſtaken who make the firſt foundation of this abby to be in A. D. 1088. 2 Will. Rufi. For it appears by the charters in the Monaſticon, vol. i. p. 387. a. 390. a. that William the Conqueror was a good benefactor to it.

PONTEFRACT, St. Clement.

Ilbert de Lacy, in the caſtle which he built here, founded a chapel to the honor of St. Clement, temp. Will. Rufi[g], and having endowed it with many lands and tithes[h], made it collegiate, conſiſting of a dean and three prebendaries[a]. It was looked upon as a royal free chapel, and continued till the general diſſolution[b].

YORK, Hoſpital of St. Peter or St. Leonard.

THE Culdees or Secular canons belonging to the cathedral church of St. Peter in the time of K. William the Conqueror founded, on a piece of waſte ground near the weſt end[c], an hoſpital for the reception and entertainment of poor people. King William Rufus removed this hoſpital to another part of the city, and ſo much enlarged the ſame both in buildings and revenues, that he is commonly accounted the founder[d]. It was called St. Peter's hoſpital, till K. Stephen erected within the precincts of it a large church, which he dedicated to St. Leonard, after which it generally went by the name of this laſt mentioned ſaint. Herein were maintained a maſter[e], thirteen brethren, four Secular prieſts, eight ſiſters, thirty choriſters, two ſchool maſters, two hundred and ſix beadmen, and ſix ſervitors[f], with lands and rents amounting in the whole to 500 l. 11 s. 1 d. ob. per ann. but clare only 362 l. 11 s. 1 d. ob[g]. The ſite was granted, 35 Hen. 8. to Sr. Arthur Darcy; and 6 Eliz. to Robert lord Dudley. It is now called the Mint yard.

[a] So Leland. Itin. p. 34. But in the valuation of 26 Hen. 8. there is no mention of the deanry, and only of two prebends, one conſiſting of tithes in Camſall, etc. a penſion of 66 s. 8 d. from the prior of Noſtell, etc. worth clearly 14 l. 16 s. 4 d. per ann. and the other conſiſting of portions of tithes in Allerton Newton, Caſtleford, Freiſton, etc. worth 13 l. 8 s. 8 d. per ann. beſides a chantry prieſt who had 100 s. per ann. But in Stevens's Supplement, vol. i. p. 68. in the return made by the archbiſhop, 37 Hen. 8. of all colleges, hoſpitals, etc. the church or free chapel of St. Clement within the caſtle of Pomfret, founded by Hilbert Lacy, is ſaid to be of the yearly value of 22 l. 12 s. 7 d. The prebend or chantry of Adam de Potterton in the ſaid free chapel, is ſaid to be of the yearly value of 15 l. 3 s. 0 d. And the prebend or chantry of Theobald de Luce in the ſaid free chapel of the yearly value of 14 l. 5 s. 4 d. probably the firſt ſum might be the value of the deanry.

[b] And perhaps after. For, unleſs it be a miſtake in my memorandums, pat. 5 Jac. 1. p. 20. is a grant of the prebend called Theobald de Luce in this chapel.

[a] Gilbert earl of Lincoln, eldeſt ſon to the founder, having been baptized and educated during his infancy in this monaſtery, (Mon. Angl. tom. ii. p. 165.) renders this probable. Indeed Thurſtan archbiſhop is one of the witneſſes to the charter of foundation, which could not be before A. D. 1119. But that charter ſeems to be a grant or confirmation of grants to a monaſtery rather founded ſome years before, than to one then about to be erected.

[b] "And St. Nicholas," as mſ. Bodl. But this is not mentioned in any of the charters.

[b] This grant was confirmed by K. Henry 1. before Auguſt 15. A. D. 1127. For Richard biſhop of Hereford, who is one of the witneſſes to it, (Mon. Angl. tom. ii. p. 35.) died that day. Godwin, and Willis de epiſc. Hereford.

[c] So expreſsly in the Monaſt. vol. i. p. 41. and Stevens's Append. p. 353. But in Dr. Hutton's extracts out of the Lincoln regiſters, there is mention (anno 12 Hugonis Wells episc.) of a penſion of five marks granted out of the church of Daylington to the "prioreſs and nuns of Wudechirch."

[d] So both in the Latin and Engliſh Monaſticon. But it is probably falſely printed for 47 l. 0 s. 4 d. For the ſumma inde and clara are both 47 l. 0 s. 4 d. in Stevens, vol. i. p. 27.

HODE.

This was originally an heremitage for a monk of Whitby, but A. D. 1138. was given by Roger Mowbray to a convent of Ciſtertian monks, who were driven from Calder in Cumberland by the incurſions of the Scots. Here they continued four or five years, and then were removed to Byland. Afterward Samſon de Albiny giving them ſome other lands and tithes in exchange, this place was granted to the monaſtery of Newburgh, and a cell of Black canons from thence fixed for ſome time here, dedicated to the bleſſed Virgin.

[c] Not Thomas Holland earl of Kent, as in Speed. This Thomas lord Wake was a mighty well-wiſher to theſe Religious foundations; for beſides theſe, he once intended to found and endow one at Harwedon Magna, as Mon. Angl. vol. ii. p. 350 which did not take effect; and 18 Ed. 3. he obtained licence from the king to bring out of Brabant four or ſix nuns of the order of Preachers, and to found an houſe for them in this kingdom. YORK, Crouched Friers.

The friers of the order of the Holy Croſs began to ſettle in this city in the beginning of the reign of king Edward 2. but were diſcountenanced by the archbiſhop, becauſe they were not one of the four orders of Mendicants allowed of by the pope[b]. They had alſo given them by Thomas lord Wake, 21 Ed. 3. one toft and ten acres of land on the moore of Blakeſhawe in Farndale, Yorkſhire, for building an oratory and habitation[c]. But what ſettlement they obtained at either place I know not.

Thomas de Holland duke of Surrey, earl of Kent, and lord Wake, founded a Carthuſian priory here dedicated to the bleſſed Virgin and St. Nicholas[a] about A. D. 1396[b]. and not only endowed it with his own manor of Bordelby, but obtained of king Richard 2. the lands and poſſeſſions of three alien priories for it; but dying ſhortly after in arms againſt K. Henry 4[c]. before all the buildings were finiſhed[d], the work was at a ſtand, and the right of the monks to their poſſeſſions was queſtioned[d], 'till king Henry 6. about A. D. 1440. confirmed in parliament all the duke's grants to them. After this, the buildings were ſoon completed, and the monaſtery floriſhed 'till the general diſſolution, about which time the revenues of it were valued at 382 l. 5 s. 11 d. ob. per ann. in the whole, and 323 l. 2 s. 10 d. ob. clearly[e]. [b] This college (as the friendly J. Jones of Galltvaynan M. D. informs me) is ſaid to have been founded by Hwfa ap Cyndelw lord of Lys Llivon in Angleſey, and one of the fifteen tribes, who lived in the time of Griffith ap Conan prince of North Wales and Owen his ſon, or the former part of the twelfth century. It was certainly in being before A. D. 1291. becauſe rated in the Lincoln taxation.

[e] In the Lincoln taxation, "Praepoſitura in eccleſia de "Caſtro Kybii archidiac. Angleſey," is rated at thirty nine marks, alone: And there is then mention of three portioniſts only; the firſt of which had xi. marks per ann. and the other two xi. marks between them. Willis's Bangor, p. 201. But the number of prebendaries ſeems to have been greater at the diſſolution, tho' the revenues were valued lower; for A. D. 1553. twelve perſons belonging to this college enjoyed penſions, as Willis's Hiſtory of Abbies, vol. ii. p. 303.

[f] The great tythes of Holy Head belong to Jeſus college Oxford by the gift of Rice Gwynne eſquire, A. D. 1648. N. B. The pencless or preſident of the collegiate church at Holy Head was one of the three ſpiritual lords of Angleſey, his tenure being baron or knight's ſervice.

[g] Penmon or Penmaine is on the continent of Angleſey; but this priory, having poſſeſſions and perhaps ſome Religious there to look after them, is often called by that name.

[h] So the Monaſticon, vol. ii. p. 338. But from its being called often St. Cyriols or St. Siriols (even in the valuation, 26 Hen. 8. as Stevens, vol. i. p. 23. and in the grant to More "Priorat. S. Siriolis alias Penmaine,") it was probably dedicated alſo unto him. In Speed's maps the remains of this houſe are called St. Syrian's chapel; and the place on the eaſt part of Angleſey, there called the priory, I take to have been Penmon. The prior of Penmon was one of the three ſpiritual lords of Angleſey.

[i] Leweline's firſt grant bearing that date.

I can give no account of the founder, but it was generally called an abby [h], and is ſaid to have produced a great number of holy men [i]. It was dedicated to St. Mary, and continued till the general diſſolution of ſuch houſes, when it was found to be endowed with 46 l. 1 s. 4 d. ob. per ann. as Dugdale, and 58 l. 6 s. 2 d. as Speed, and was granted, 1 Ed. 6. to Sr. Thomas Seymour, and 3 Ed. 6. to John earl of Warwick.

BANCHOR or Bangor[a].

A BISHOPRIC was probably erected here before the middle of the ſixth century[b] by Malgwyn or Malgo Conan prince of North Wales; and Deiniel or Daniel ſon of Dinothus abbat of Bangor in Flintſhire, who had before founded a college or monaſtery here[c], was made the firſt biſhop[d]. We have very little or no account of the monaſtery afterwards[e], and but a ſlender one of the biſhops till A. D. 1039[f]. After which time there ſeems to have been a regular ſucceſſion of prelates in this ſee; tho' by reaſon of the wars they had not all of them a quiet enjoyment[g]. The revenues of this biſhopric were valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 151 l. 3 s. 0 d. per ann. in the whole, and 131 l. 16 s. 4 d. clear[h]. BETHKELERT or De Valle S. Mariae in Snaudonia.

A PRIORY of Black canons dedicated to St. Mary of a very ancient foundation: For, upon its being much damaged by fire about A. D. 1283. Anianus biſhop of Bangor granted an indulgence to all thoſe that ſhould contribute towards the rebuilding it, and therein calls it, The oldeſt Religious houſe in all Wales except Bardſey. It was valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 70 l. 3 s. 8 d. as Dugdale, and 69 l. 3 s. 8 d. as Speed[a]; and granted, 27 Hen. 8. in exchange to the monaſtery of Chertſey in Surry; and 29 Hen. 8. together with Chertſey, to the abby of Biſham in Berkſhire, and now belongs to lord Radnor.

[a] I find three places of this name, which are ſometimes confounded; viz. the firſt and moſt ancient in Flintſhire, where the famous monaſtery was; the ſecond here, which is thought to owe its riſe to a colony from the former; the third in the county of Down in Ireland, where Comgallus inſtituted a monaſtery like and equal to that in Flintſhire: There is likewiſe one place of this name in Cardiganſhire, and another in Bell Iſle near Breſt, of no note.

[b] Uſher placeth Daniel's coming hither in A. D. 516. and his death in 545. but others place it ſomewhat later.

[c] Uſher calls it a college; but Creſſy, p. 233. ſaith it was a monaſtery.

[d] Conſecrated thereto by Dubritius, as Uſher.

[e] Speed ſaith, the monaſtery was famous in the Saxon times, but ſeemingly without good authority.

[g] Biſhop Robert was taken priſoner by king John A. D. 1210. Biſhop Anian complains of oppreſſions A. D. 1298. The cathedral was burnt down in Owen Glendour's rebellion, A. [l] The grants, etc. thus * marked, are printed in Willis's Survey of Bangor.

Here was an old monaſtery of St. Beuno founded, A. D. 616[c]. by Guithin or Gwyddaint nearly related to the princes of North Wales. It was afterwards turned into a monaſtery of White monks[d]; but theſe ſeem to have been ſoon ſuppreſſed; for at the time of the Lincoln taxation it was a collegiate church conſiſting of five portioniſts[e] or prebendaries, and continued ſo 'till the diſſolution.

D. 1299. he is generally eſteemed the founder[h]. It was granted to Thomas Brown and William Breton, 7 Ed. 6. and converted into a free ſchool by the truſtees of Dr. Jeffery Glynn brother to biſhop Glynn and advocate of Doctors commons ſhortly after A. FLINTSHIRE.

BANCORNABURGH, Banchor, or Bangor Iskoed or Monachorum.

HERE was probably a famous Roman city called Bonium or Bovium, and certainly a very ancient[a] monaſtery, tho' I believe not ſo old as king Lucius, as ſome affirm[b]. Bede and others mention it as very floriſhing at the coming of St. Auguſtine; and it muſt have been ſo, if, as all our writers except one[c] report, Ethelfrid king of the Angles[d], in his wars with the Britains in the beginning of the ſeventh[e] century, ſlew near twelve hundred of them for praying for the ſucceſs of their countrymen and fellow chriſtians againſt the Saxon infidels. After which time, it probably went to decay; for William of Malmſbury, who lived ſhortly after the Norman Conqueſt, ſaith, There remained only in his time the footſteps of ſo great a place, ſo many ruinous churches, and ſuch heaps of rubbiſh, as were hardly elſewhere to be met with.

ST. ASAPH.

KENTIGERN biſhop of Glaſcow being driven out of Scotland, founded an epiſcopal ſeat[f] and monaſtery[g] here, about the middle[h] of the ſixth century, and became the firſt biſhop. Upon his return into Scotland, he made Aſaph or Haſſaph, an eminently holy and good man, his ſucceſſor, and from him both the church and place have ſince been called St. Aſaph. But from the death of St. Aſaph, A. D. 596[i]. there is no account of the monaſtery, and little or no account of any biſhops till A. D. 1143[k]. And tho' there hath been a conſtant and regular ſucceſſion from that time, yet, by reaſon of the wars between the Engliſh and the Welſh, and Owen Glendour's or Glyndyfrdwy's rebellion, the cathedral church, with the biſhop's and canons houſes, were more than once deſtroyed[l], and for many years in ruins. Upon one of theſe devaſtations, or the fears of it[m], biſhop Anian the ſecond endeavoured, A. D. 1278. to remove the ſee to Ruthlan or Ruddlan, two miles northward. And king Edward 1. granted his licence for it[n] A. D. 1284. and promiſed both ground for the church, etc. and one thouſand marks towards the building: But this did not take effect. The biſhopric was valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 202 l. 10 s. 6 d[o]. in the whole, and at 187 l. 11 s. 6 d. clear. Beſides the biſhop, here are a dean, archdeacon[a], ſix prebendaries, ſeven canons curſal, four vicars choral, an organiſt, four lay clerks or ſinging men, four choriſters, etc.

[a] Speed in his Theatre of Great Britain, fol. 1676. book ii. p. 121. ſaith, this was "the firſt monaſtery that "is read of in the world;" and he might probably have ſaid the greateſt too, if here were, as Mr. Vaughan (from the old Britiſh Triades) tells us (ſee notes to Camden, edit. 1695. in Flintſhire) two thouſand four hundred monks, who in their turns, viz. one hundred every hour, read prayers and ſung pſalms continually, ſo that there never was any intermiſſion of divine ſervice: Or if here were but, as Bede (Eccl. Hiſt. lib. ii. cap. 2.) ſaith, ſo many monks, that being divided into ſeven parts, having each a proper ruler over them, no part contained leſs than three hundred men, who all lived by their labour, it muſt have had more perſons than any other ſuch houſe in theſe kingdoms.

BASINGWERK in the pariſh of Holywell.

RANULPH earl of Cheſter ſeems to have begun a monaſtery here about A. D. 1131[c]. which was probably much improved and made an abby for Ciſtertian monks by king Henry 2.[d] about A. D. 1159[e]. It was dedicated to St. Mary, had lands and poſſeſſions 26 Hen. 8. of the yearly value of 150 l. 7 s. 3 d. as Dugdale, and 157 l. 15 s. 2 d. as Speed, and was granted, 32 Hen. 8. to Henry ap Harry.

[c] Mon. Angl. vol. i. p. 720. ex Chronico S. Werburgae in bibl. Cotton. The mſ. Annals of Parcolude place this foundation in 1132.

[d] Leland. Collect. vol. i. p. 101. ſaith, "Henricus 2. "fundator originalis." Others attribute the firſt foundation to the earl; for what king Henry 2. did was not till after 1150. Biſhop Fleetwood, in his notes on Wenefrede's Life, p. 24. makes the king founder, and the earl chief benefactor. I rather choſe to put it as above.

[e] So Bromton in Decem ſcript. col. 1048. expreſly. Leland, Collect. vol. ii. p. 375. ſpeaks of it as being done after A. D. 1156. when he began his wars with the Welſh and had fortified Rhudland caſtle. See alſo Decem ſcript. col. ii. In a mſ. of biſhop Humfrys, it is ſaid, that K. Henry 1. originally founded at Baſingwerk a cell of Templars; and that it was not made an houſe for Ciſtertian monks till A. D. 1312. The Hiſtory of Wales 8vo. Lond. 1702. p. 175. under the year 1156. ſaith, that "King Henry 2. "leaving the caſtles of Ruthland and Baſingwerk well "manned and fortified, and having near the latter found- "ed a public ſtructure, for the order of Knight's Templars, "returned into England." The additions to Camden's Flintſhire (edit. 1695.) likewiſe ſay, from Dr. Powel, that this abby was firſt founded A. D. 1312. But this Ranulph earl of Cheſter was poiſoned in Jan. 1153. as Dugd. Baron. vol. i. p. 40. and the monks were certainly here before A. D. 1240. they being mentioned in both Lewelline and his ſon David's charters, Mon. Angl. vol. i. p. 720. And it is called an abby, A. D. 1291.

RHUDLAND.

Here was an houſe of Black friers before A. D. 1268. when Anian de Schonan, prior of this houſe, was made biſhop of St. Aſaph. It ſuffered very much in the wars of king Edward 1. with Lewelline laſt prince of Wales, but recovered and ſubſiſted till the diſſolution, when it was granted to Henry ap Harry 32 Hen. 8.

Vide in Willis's Survey of St. Aſaph, p. 159. of XVII l. X s. paid to theſe friers, A. D. 1284. for damages by the wars.

GLAMORGANSHIRE.

Cungarus, or, as he was alſo called, Docuinus, having ſettled one monaſtery in Somerſetſhire, is ſaid to have come into this county about A. D. 474. and to have built another here in ſome place now unknown for twelve monks or canons, which was dedicated to the Holy Trinity, and endowed by Paulentus king of Glamorgan.

[c] There ſeems to be ſome miſtake in the names of theſe places. N. B. The Ciſtertians here were of the Fratres Griſei kind, as Leland. Itin. vol. viii. p. 66. but Neuſtr. Pia doth not reckon this houſe amongſt thoſe of that order, as Stevens, vol. ii. p. 254.

[d] The Additions to Camden (edit. 1695.) ſpeak of an abby and an hoſpital at Rhudland, and of a gate half a mile from the village; this laſt is probably the remains of the hoſpital, which was not in, but near Rhudland. Mr. Willis, in his Survey of Bangor, p. 357. ſaith, "Here is "reported to have ſtood an abby, the Religious of which "are ſaid to have been of a military order." But nothing more of this hath occurred to me.

LLANCARVAN[a].

LLANDAFFE[c].

A bishopric was erected here in the time of St. Dubritius[d], whoſe death is generally placed in A. D. 522. tho' ſome place it almoſt an hundred years later[e]. Hiſtorians have preſerved the names of the biſhops of this ſee from its firſt erection; tho' with much uncertainty as to the times of their conſecrations and deaths, till the latter end of the ninth century. The members of this church were at firſt endowed with great poſſeſſions, but deprived of moſt of them ſhortly after the Conqueſt[f], when their firſt church was deſtroyed. And the preſent fabric (which was built by biſhop Urban A. D. 1120[g]. and dedicated to St. Peter, St. Dubritius, St. Teileiau, and St. Oudoceus[h]) hath of late fallen into great decay, but all poſſible care is taken to preſerve it[i]. The revenues of this biſhopric were valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 154 l. 14 s. 2 d per ann. and the common revenues of the chapter at 87 l. 12 s. 11 d. per ann[k]. There are now belonging to this church a biſhop[l], archdeacon[m], twelve prebendaries, and two vicars choral. Here were alſo formerly[n] an organiſt, four ſinging men, and four choriſters.

NETH.

Richard de Grainville and Conſtance his wife gave their chapel in the caſtle at Neth, the tithes belonging to it, a large tract of waſte land and other poſſeſſions, temp. Hen. 1 [a]. to the abbat and convent of Savigny near Lions in France, that they might build an abby here. And a very fair [b] abby (dedicated to the Holy Trinity) was built accordingly on the weſt [c] ſide of the river a little below the town, for monks of the order of Savigny [d] or Fratres Griſei [e], who ſoon afterwards became Ciſtertians [f]. Notwithſtanding the original donation to Savigny [g], I don't find that this houſe was ever ſubject to that foreign abby, or accounted as alien. There were eight [h] monks in it about the time of the diſſolution, when it was found to be endowed with 132 l. 7 s. 7 d. ob. per ann. as Dugdale, and 150 l. 4 s. 9 d. as Speed, and was granted, 33 Hen. 8. to Sr. Richard Williams alias Crumwell in exchange.

[a] Grainville was one of Fitz Haimon's knights, who came about A. D. 1090. to aſſiſt Aeneon and Jeſtin againſt Rheſe prince of South Wales, as Camden, in Glamorganſhire: And in his grant, he ſaith, "Haec omnia damus, "Henrici regis Anglorum patrocinio et conſenſu," which ſhews that his gift to Savigney muſt have been in this king's time; but how long after that the abby was built, or even by whom it was built, I cannot yet learn; but if it was built when Robert earl of Glouceſter made his donation, it muſt have been before A. D. 1147. becauſe he died that year, as Mon. Angl. vol. i. p. 477.

[b] Leland, Itin. vol. v. p. 11. ſpeaks of Neth as the "faireſt abby of all Wales;" but in his Collect. vol. ii. p. 92. he ſeems to give Margan the preference of all the Ciſtertian houſes in theſe parts.

VALLIS ROSINA.

ST. David is ſaid, ſoon after the famous Britiſh Synod A. D. 519. for ſuppreſſing the Pelagian hereſy, to have built a monaſtery at a place thus named (and ſuppoſed to be near Menevia) for monks to ſupport themſelves with the labour of their own hands, and yet he required them to ſpend a conſiderable part of every day in prayer, reading and holy meditation.

Vide Capgrave in Vita S. Davidis: Stevens's Supplement, vol. i. p. 216. Creſſy's Church Hiſtory, p. 236.

[a] Leland. Collect. vol. i. p. 104. "Owen Kevelioc princeps Powiſiae primus fundator:" And ſo in the Welſh pedigree, "Owen Keveliog lord of one half of Powis built the abby of Yſtrat Marchel." And Speed hath, "Owen ſon of Griffin prince of Powis, founder; Wenneowin his ſon confirmed it, A. D. 1202. 4 Joan." And in the charter of Owen the ſon of Griffin in the Monaſticon, it is ſaid that he gave them lands, "ad aedificandam abbatiam." But Madoc's charter is called in the Monaſt. "the foundation charter;" and he is there not only eſteemed founder, but his charter ſaith, that he gave "villam quae vocatur Llinliequeſtel ad conſtruendum ibidem monaſterium." To reconcile this, I conjecture, that Owen Keveliog, who died A. D. 1197. leaving his eſtate to his ſon Wenneowin, (as Hiſt. of Wales, p. 217.) was the original founder A. D. 1170. but that after his deceaſe, and his ſon's being involved in war and worſted by it, Madoc might refound it; or perhaps, on account of ſome inconveniencies, build a new abby in a different place: For his firſt charter implies (in my opinion) that there was an abby of Stratmarkell or apud Vallem Crucis then in being; and his giving "monachis de Stratmarkell villam de L. ad conſtruendum ibidem monaſterium," ſeems to imply a new foundation in another place. This may likewiſe bring his charters near together; but if we ſuppoſe him to be original founder, and his firſt charter to have been made A. D. 1170. that will be fifty two years before his ſecond charter, which is dated A. D. 1222.

[d] Hen. Sulgrave, and from him Leland, Itin. vol. viii. p. 101. and Stevens, vol. i. p. 38. mention in the dioceſe of St. Aſaph, "Abbatia de Hudham, moniales Albae." Quaere, If this might not be the place.

MENEVIA or St. David's.

St. Patric[a] is ſaid to have founded a monaſtery at Menevia, about A. D. 470. and to have dedicated it to St. Andrew.

St. David tranſlated the archbiſhopric of Wales from Caerleon hither[b] in ſome part of the ſixth century[c], and the town thereupon took his name ſoon after his deceaſe, and the church was commended to his patronage. This ſee ſeems to have been generally full, and to have enjoyed the archbiſhopric till about A. D. 930[d]. when Sampſon, withdrawing from his province on account of a peſtilential diſtemper which then raged there, carried the pall with him to Dole in Britany. But the biſhops of this ſee are ſaid to have conſecrated the Welſh biſhops, and to have been primates to them till the time of king Henry 1[e]. when Bernard a Norman, being made biſhop of it, profeſſed ſubjection to the archbiſhop of Canterbury as his metropolitan. The biſhopric was valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 426 l. 2 s. 1 d. per ann. and the common revenues of the church at 210 l. 12 s. 0 d. per ann. in the whole, and at 193 l. 14 s. 10 d[f]. clear. There is no dean in this cathedral, but a precentor, (who hath the place and power of a dean) chancellor, treaſurer, four archdeacons, viz. of St. David's, Brecknock, Caermarthen, and Cardigan; nineteen prebendaries, eight vicars choral, four choriſters, etc.

[b] This is the moſt general account: But in Spelman's Councils, vol. i. p. 25. it is ſaid that Dubritius removed the archbiſhopric from Carleon to Landaffe, and St. David removed it from Landaffe to Menevia.

[c] Authors differ very much about this time. According to Spelman's Councils, vol. i. p. 61, 62. it ſhould be ſhortly after Dubricius's reſignation and his being made archbiſhop. But others place it much later. See Mr. Willis's Survey of St. David's cathedral, p. 93.

[d] Godwin and others place it about this time. But ſome much ſooner. See Creſſy and Collier's Eccleſiaſt. Hiſtory, vol. i. p. 201.

[e] So Godwin and Leland, Collect. vol. ii. p. 108. from Giraldus Cambrenſis. And Uſher in Indice Chronolog. ſub A. D. 1115. But Creſſy contends that all the Britiſh biſhops were ſubject to the archbiſhop of Canterbury from A. D. 982. when Gucan biſhop of Landaff was conſecrated by archbiſhop Dunſtan. See Collier, vol. i. p. 201. And archbiſhop Uſher in his Antiq. Eccl. Brit. p. 85. edit. 4to. ſaith, that the church of Landaff denied ſubjection to St. David's, and that the biſhops of it were, according to the Landaff regiſter, conſecrated by the archbiſhop of Canterbury from the time of Oudouceus, in the ſixth century. In the firſt volume of archdeacon Wilkins's Councils, p. 412. there is mention of a difference, A. D. 1132. between the biſhops of St. David's and Landaffe about the bounds of their dioceſes. But no account how it was determined.

[e] Leland, Itin. vol. v. p. 12. calls St. Dogmael's a priory of Bonhommes. The Monaſticon placeth this houſe amongſt the Benedictines; but it was of that ſtrict and reformed ſort of Benedictines, called the order of Tiron.

[f] Dugd. Baron. vol. i. p. 729.

[g] Dugdale, ibid. perhaps in the latter part of it. For Bernard biſhop of St. David's was witneſs to Robert's charter, and he was not advanced to that ſee till the ſixteenth year of this reign. Reyner, p. 160. placeth it about A. D. 1126.

[h] So the Monaſticon. But Speed ſaith to St. Martin; and Riſdon, in his Devonſhire, vol. i. p. 55. 59. ſaith, to St. Mary of Camoys.

[k] This is Dugdale's valuation. Speed's is 68 l. 1 s. 6 d. And in Stevens's Supplement, vol. i. p. 26. the ſumma inde and ſumma clara are 28 l. 1 s. 6 d. only. But probably it is falſely printed. The Bennet college mſ. ſaith, here were five monks. Mr. Willis's Hiſt. of Abbies, vol. ii. p. 318. ſaith the abbat and eight others ſubſcribed to the ſupremacy.

[l] Mr. Stevens, vol. ii. p. 257. contends for Robert's being the original founder, and this the foundation charter. But Robert's deed ſeems to me to ſuppoſe monks there, and that, " eorum paupertati compatiens, et neceſſitatibus con- " currere cupiens," he granted them the antient church of St. Dogmael, etc. and got an abbat ſet over them.

PEMBROKE or Monketon in the ſuburbs of Pembroke.

Arnulph[a] earl of Pembroke having given the church of St. Nicholas within his caſtle of Pembroke and twenty carucates of land, in A. D. 1098. to the abby of St. Martin at Sayes in Normandy, here was ſhortly after a Benedictine priory erected, dedicated to St. Nicolas[b], and made a cell to that foreign abby. William and Walter Mareſchal earls of Pembroke were benefactors to it. King Edward 3. ſeiſed it into his hands, when he had wars with France, and king Henry 4[c]. reſtored it. But being ſeiſed again, it was granted, 19 Hen. 6. to Humphrey duke of Glouceſter, who gave it, 21 Hen. 6[d]. as a cell to St. Albans, and the king confirmed his gift in the twenty ſeventh year of his reign. It was valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 113 l. 2 s. 6 d. ob. q. as Speed[e], and at 57 l. 9 s. 3 d. ob. q. as Dugdale[e], and was granted, 37 Hen. 8. to John Vaughan and Katharine his wife.

Without the town[f] was a priory of Black canons before the year 1200[g]. dedicated to St. Mary and Thomas the martyr, and liberally endowed, if not founded, by Robert de Haverford lord of this place. It was valued, 26 Hen. 8. at 133 l. 11 s. 1 d. as Dugdale, and 135 l. 6 s. 1 d. as Speed, and granted, 38 Hen. 8. to Roger and Thomas Barlow.

This houſe was dedicated to St. Mary and St. Budoc, and is ſaid to have been ſubordinate to St. Dogmael's[m], but was found, 26 Hen. 8. to have diſtinct revenues of its own to the value of 67 l. 15 s. 3 d[n]. per ann. in the whole, and 52 l. 2 s. 5 d. clear, and was granted, 38 Hen. 8. to Roger and Thomas Barlow.

[k] There is no date to either of the charters in the Monaſticon; but the latter, which ſeems to have been made ſome conſiderable time after the former, is witneſſed by Nicolaus fil. THE ISLE OF MAN.

The BISHOPRIC.

The Scotch writers contend that this iſland was converted to Chriſtianity by the care of Crathlint king of Scotland, and that he made Amphibalus biſhop here about A. D. 360. But the more generally received and better opinion is, that Chriſtianity was planted here by St. Patric and the epiſcopal ſee erected by him A. D. 447. The biſhop is nominated by the governor of the iſland, approved of by the king, and conſecrated by the archbiſhop of York, as one of his ſuffragans, but hath no place in parliament.

N. B. That where any houſe was twice granted, I have generally put down the latter grant only, and ſeldom taken notice of the former. When the firſt grant is put down, the figures are in a parentheſis. The croſſes or daggers denotes grants in exchange for other lands.

CORRECTIONS and ADDITIONS.

PAG. 11. Here, and in all other places of this book, where Dugdale's Warwickſhire, is referred to, and the edition is not mentioned, it is the firſt edition.

CHESHIRE.

WIBBYNBURY. Here was an hoſpital of a maſter and brethren, dedicated to the Holy Croſs and St. George, before A. D. 1464. For amongſt the author's papers there was a letter of confraternity granted to John Fenton and Agnes his wife, of that date.

P. 72. the account of BODMIN SAINT LAURENCE hoſpital ſhould have been thus:

About a mile from Bodmin is St. Laurence, a poor hoſpital or lazar houſe; as Davies's mſ. Leland's Itin. The author of Magn. Brit. Ant. et Nova ſaith, p. 315, 340. it is on the eaſt of the town, well endowed for nineteen leprous people, two whole men and women, and a prieſt to miniſter unto them.

The quaere or note [m] ſhould have been put to the ſecond almſhouſe there.

DORSETSHIRE.

LYME. About A. D. 1322. William Tay had leave to give a meſſuage and eight acres of land in Lyme to the Carmelite or White friers there.

Vide Ad quod damnum rot. 15 Ed. 2.

POOL. In the Engliſh Topographer, Lond. 1720. 8vo. p. 43. there is an account of a ſeal then in poſſeſſion of Richard Rawlinſon LL.D. F. R. S. with this inſcription, " S[igillum] conv. de Pool."

There ſeems likewiſe to have been an houſe of Friers here; for the friery of St. George in Pool, with ſeveral houſes and gardens thereunto belonging, was granted by K. Edw. 6. to John Churchill and William Samways. Vide pat. 3 Ed. 6.

WILCHESWOOD in the pariſh of Langton in the Iſle of Purbeck. Coker, in Hiſt. of Dorſetſhire, p. 48. ſaith, " Albreda de Lincoln daughter and heireſs " of Al. de Lincoln, a great baron, dying without " iſſue, gave Langton to Ingelram le Walleys or " Walch, whoſe grandchild Roger built and endowed a little priory at Wilcheſſwood near adjoining." But perhaps this might be a chantry only, and, as my good friend Browne Willis eſquire (who ſent me this account of theſe Dorſetſhire Houſes) rightly obſerves, was older than Roger Walleys, who did not flouriſh 'till the latter part of the reign of K. Edward 3.

P. 46. Under MIRMAUD and DENNY occurs SEMPLINGHAM, which is for the moſt part wrote Sempringham; but it is many times wrote alſo Sempingham and Semplingham in the Monaſticon.

P. 77. PENRITH. An Houſe of Auſtin or Gray friers. Leland, Itin. vol. vii. p. 49. calls them Gray friers; and from him the author of Collect. Anglominorit. ſpeaks of an houſe of Gray friers here. But no ſuch houſe is mentioned under any of the ſeven cuſtodies of thoſe friers in Stevens, vol. i. p. 96. and the Eſcaet. roll, 7 Ed. 3. calls them Auſtin friers.

P. 91. Note (b) the laſt Words, viz. " Heies, Cutton " in Poltmore pariſh," are names of two of the prebends, and were an interlineation which ſhould have been put in note (c) after Mon. Angl. vol. ii. p. 9.

P. 127. the title of WALDEN ſhould be, LITTLE WALDEN, Chipping or Saffron Walden.

P. 152, 153. Ex Leland. Collect. vol. i. f. 613. i. e. of the mſ. It is p. 428. of the printed book. But this is a quotation from the Monaſticon, which could refer only to the mſ. This being the caſe probably in other quotations from the Monaſticon, is here obſerved to prevent miſtakes.

P. 189. STORTFOTD. This ſeems to be the ſame foundation which is mentioned before in Eſſex, p. 136.

P. 219. To the note [c] add: The manor of Strode was granted by the Hoſpitalars to K. Edward 2. and by K. Ed. 3. was granted to the counteſs of Pembroke, as in the Preface, p. x. note [c].

P. 225. WINCHELSEA is in Suſſex: And an account of this houſe (put here by miſtake) is more fully given in that county, p. 564.

P. 227. To the account of COBHAM college add: The ſite of this college, and all the lands and poſſeſſions thereunto belonging were ſold by the maſter (with the king's conſent) to George lord Cobham, and confirmed to him by the act of parliament 31 Hen. 8. for granting the greater monaſteries to the king. See Statutes at Large, vol. i. p. 836.

P. 235. MANCHESTER. This college received a new foundation or eſtabliſhment A. D. 1635. For the inſcription upon their ſeal is " Sigillum col-

P. 356. De Monte Jovis, etc. read, After the cardinal's fall it was granted to . . . . But notwithſtanding the grant of this houſe to the cardinal, I queſtion whether he ever got poſſeſſion of it: For, upon a looſe paper now before me, I find the following words of my brother's writing, “ When “ Heverland priory was diſſolved by the pope's “ bull, William Hals the patron ſeized it as an “ eſcheat, and it hath ſince gone along with the “ manors.”

P. 360. St. Giles's Hospital was founded for a maſter, three prieſts, and twelve poor women ſiſters, as Leland's Collect. vol. i. p. 61.

P. 385. Gare. That judicious antiquary Brown Willis eſquire, informs me, that in the pariſh of Anſlop or Hanſlap, on the edge of Buckinghamſhire next Northamptonſhire, there is a very ancient edifice, accounted extraparochial, and called Gore Chapel, which might probably be this Gore nunnery.

P. 441. Ewelme. An account of the foundation of this hoſpital, and the ſtatutes and ordinances for the allowances and behaviour of the ſeveral members of it, printed by Mr. Hearne, from a manuſcript in the Harleian library, at the end of the Chronicles of Tho. Otterborne and John Whethamſted, 8vo. Oxon. 1732.

P. 472. Minchin Barrow. St. Mary and St. Edwin might perhaps be the firſt patron ſaints of this place. But it was certainly dedicated to the Holy Trinity at the Reformation, as appears from Dr. Hutton's Collections out of the Regiſters at Wells.

P. 452. Brewood. This is not a different pariſh from Breewood in Staffordſhire, but part of the ſame pariſh extending itſelf into Shropſhire; ſo that the Ciſtertian nuns or White Ladies here, and the Benedictine nuns or Black Ladies in p. 500. were both in the ſame pariſh, as a good antiquary informs me, tho' in different counties: And the ruins of both houſes are yet remaining.

P. 477. Vicars College or Collegium Vicariorum Novi Clauſi Wellenſ. Queen Elizabeth's charter for refounding this college bears date Nov. 5. A. D. 1591. The number of vicars is thereby appointed to be not leſs than fourteen, nor more than twenty. Vicars choral in this church were firſt appointed, as I am informed, about A. D. 1240. by biſhop Joceline, who ordained one to every canon or prebendary to ſupply their turns in chanting and performing divine ſervice.

Mountery college, was founded by biſhop Erghum's executors A. D. 1407. by name of “ Collegium “ Societatis Preſbyterorum Anellariorum Novae “ Aulae in eccleſia Cathedr. Wellenſi.”

The hoſpital in Brigg Street (or as it is now called, Beggar's Street) was augmented alſo by biſhop Still, and the number of poor encreaſed by him to thirty. But by the different prices of proviſions, etc. there are only twenty now in it [a].

P. 478. After Yevele, I ſhould have inſerted, Bath, St. Magdalene hoſpital, or Holloway near Bath, in the pariſh of Widcomb. John Cantlow, who was prior of Bath from A. D. 1489 to 1499. “ built a “ pretty little chapel here, to the honor of St. Mary “ Magdalene; and alſo, as it is there ſaid, the little hoſpital adjoyning for lunaticks [b]. Vid. Wood's Athen. et Faſti Oxon. vol. i. Faſti, col. 7. edit. 1721.

Bablew, etc. Quaere, Whether theſe were not reputed cells or priories only, becauſe they were manors and eſtates belonging to Religious houſes. For in Norfolk and Suffolk we have manor houſes now called Priories, not for that there were ever any Religious in them, but becauſe they were formerly the eſtates of ſome priories. Thus the manor houſe of Uvedales in Bedingham is called Bedingham priory, becauſe it formerly belonged to Walſingham priory. And the ſite of the manor of Broomholme in Carleton Colvile is called The priory, becauſe it was the eſtate of the prior and convent of Broomholme. And the piece of land in Keſſingland, whereon the rectory houſe and barn formerly ſtood, is ſtill called The Nunnery Yard, becauſe the rectory was impropriated to the nuns of St. Clare without Aldgate, London.

P. 497. Dudley. The original foundation deed, as I am informed, is in the hands of the right honorable John lord Ward.

P. 498. Croxden. The original foundation charter, which was in the hands of Mr. Downing in St. Paul's Church-yard A. D. 1700. is now the property of Richard Rawlinſon, LL. D. and F. R. S.

P. 500. Brewood. The ſite of this houſe belongs to Peter Giffard of Chillington eſquire, a deſcendant probably of Thomas Gifford, to whom it was firſt granted.

P. 583. Haliwell. This ſeems to have been a chantry only, where divine ſervice was to be performed by the canons of Rouceſter.

P. 633. Rippon. Sr. Tho. Herbert's Hiſtory of this collegiate church is printed in the Appendix to Drake's Hiſt and Antiq. of York, p. xii. and contains a brief account of the foundation, revenues, and members of this church, with the charters of privileges granted to it by K. Ethelſtan, K. Henry 1. and K. Stephen.

P. 638. York, St. Mary's. In Drake's Hiſt. and Antiq. of York, from p. 574 to p. 600. a very large account of this abby; and from p. 601 to 624. above ſeventy deeds relating to it, never before printed.

P. 641. York, Trinity, or Chriſt Church. In Drake's Hiſt. and Antiq. of York, p. 263. an account of the foundation and revenues of this houſe; and in the Append. p. xliii. pat. 30 Ed. 3. printed.

P. 642. York, St. Leonard's. In the aforeſaid book of Mr. Drake's, p. 332. a large account of this hoſpital.

P. 665. Nun Appleton. See Drake, p. 384.

P. 668, Sinningthwaite. See Drake, p. 395.

P. 680. Helagh Park. See Drake, p. 390.

P. 684. York, Black friers. See in Drake, p. 274. and Append. p. l. an account of this houſe, three charters printed at large, and extracts of moſt of the charters granted to it.

P. 685. York, Minors and White friers. In Drake's Append, p. xlvii and li. moſt of the charters granted to theſe friers and referred to in this book, are printed.

P. 686. Bedern. Mr. Drake, p. 572. gives a very different account of this word from that gueſſed at in note (f).

P. 700. Brecrnock houſe of Black friers was dedicated to St. Nicholas.

[b] Prior Cantlow's building the chapel appears from the verſes now or lately therein remaining; but perhaps the hoſpital might be much older, and rebuilt or repaired only by him; for 10 Kal. Jun. A. D. 1332. “ Dom. epiſc. Bath. et “ Well. conceſſit indulgentiam viginti dierum benefactoribus hoſpitalis S. Crucis et S. Mariae Magdalenae Bathon. and in the will of Hugh Wells biſhop of Lincoln made A. D. 1212. beſides a legacy to the hoſpital in Bath (probably St. John's) there is a legacy, “ Domui leproſorum extra “ Bath,” as Dr. Hutton's Collections.

P. 721. LOWHADAN. This was probably no more than a free chapel; for A. D. 1420. “ Mauritius “ Aliſander magiſter liberae capellae beatae Mariae “ de Lawhaddon, et Will. Martin rector de Le- “ tarſton permutant;” tho' Browne Willis eſquire tells me, he hath met with two or three perſons ſtyled priors of Lowhaddon.
